Why Kill a Woman?

Serious Luncheon Mistake.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE.

(Copyright 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON REPORTS that President Roosevelt will recommend new government bonds, totaling a thousand million dollars. Speaker Rainey told newspaper men the bonds might run as high as two thousand millions.

That is a lot of money, but a considerable drop from thirty thousand millions suggested to take care of farm mortgages, giving those that own the mortgages, paying high interest rates, United States government bonds at low interest rates, in place of their mortgages.

THE ARIZONA state board of pardons and paroles is making up its mind whether to hang Mrs. Winnie Ruth Judd on April 14 or let her stay in prison alive. A great, civilized state will make no mistake if it decides not to kill her. That killing would always be an ugly picture in the state's history.

That the woman is convicted of a hideous crime is no excuse for an official killing in cold blood.

"PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT will lunch daily in his executive office."

Some one should persuade the President to change that rule. To lunch "daily in your executive office," or any other office, is to encourage indigestion.

The brain depends on the stomach as much as the engine depends on the fireman who supplies coal and the furnace that turns the coal into steam.

President Roosevelt's brain is important to 123 million Americans, and it is to be hoped that his doctor, will say to him peremptorily:

"You may not lunch daily in your executive office."

That kind of luncheon ruined the digestion and shortened the life of the late E. H. Harriman, a great and useful railroad man.

WITH Miss Frances Perkins secretary of labor, first woman in the United States cabinet, and at least as able as any man there, it is a pleasure to read that Mrs. Nellie Ross is expected to be federal treasurer, and that Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, and recently Congresswoman from Florida, will have an important position in the state department, once ruled by her father.

It will be a most agreeable change to see women of ability doing the work and getting credit for it, instead of merely doing that work for some man, letting him take the credit while they get the title "secretary," and perhaps $35 a week.

GUESTS of the Salvation Army, earning nothing at the moment, were asked whether anybody was worth $80,000 a year or more, 599 said yes, 572 said no.

Babe Ruth, the baseball player, led. He had 140 votes to President Roosevelt's 97. Former Gov. Smith was fourth. Mr. McKees, head of New York's board of aldermen, and Jack Dempsey tied for fifth place. This writer is proud to announce that he got 2 votes, twice as many as were cast for John D. Rockefeller, Mussolini, Marconi

$15,000 Fire Sweeps Truck and Shipment

DRIVERS HURT AS THEY JUMP FROM VEHICLE

Tires and Tubes Burn On Lisbon-Salem Road.

BLAME BACKFIRE

Machine Owned By Cuyahoga Falls Man.

A five-ton truck and its shipment of 418 auto tires and 150 boxes of inner tubes, en route from Akron to Baltimore and Washington, was destroyed by fire, causing a loss of $15,000, on Badger's hill, near Eagleton's Glens, Lisbon-Salem road, today at 5:40 a. m.

Henry Dabel, driver, and his brother Ray, helper, of 243 Russell avenue, Akron, received minor injuries when they leaped from the burning truck. One of the men lost his hat and coat in the cab.

The blaze is believed to have been caused when the backfire from the motor ignited gasoline from a broken fuel line.

The truck was owned by G. C. Archer of 1850 Highbridge road, Cuyahoga Falls. It was loaded at the Goodrich plant in Akron Friday afternoon.

WOODSFIELD HAS $50,000 BLAZE

Half a Block of Business Section in Monroe County Seat Village Razed by Fire.

WOODSFIELD, O., March 25—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed nearly half a block in the business section here early today. Loss was estimated by officials at $50,000.

The blaze swept through Bishop's restaurant, offices of Drs. Gillespie, physicians, the Sinclair barber shop, Milligan's confectionery and the home of Mrs. Mollie Ketterer.

Firemen were handicapped in fighting the fire by sleet and rain.

Tell Us, Shaw!

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 25—Bernard Shaw you let me come to your home in London, talk to you for a long time. I always said I never met a man I didn't like. You would all like Shaw if you met him, that is everybody that is fair and honest with themselves.

You won't be able to figure him out, and that makes the smart fellows sore. He is one cross-word puzzle that has never been worked. Writers' animosity to Shaw is that they didn't think of saying what he had already said. He is away ahead of 'em.

England in all these years don't know if he is for 'em or against 'em, and a fellow Irishman knows no more about him than a Zulu.

Now when a guy can do all that and put it over, give him credit. So viva Bernard, look us over, and don't let our hospitality stand in the way of you telling us just about what cage in the zoo we belong. It's bound to do us some good.

Yours,

Will Rogers

Vandergrift, Pa., Dry For Next 62 Years

By The Associated Press.

VANDERGRIFT, Pa., March 25. — A city of nearly 12,000 persons, Vandergrift, may be destined to remain dry for the next 62 years, even if the 18th amendment is repealed.

The city was founded in 1896 on land deeded to the Vandergrift Land and Improvement company by the old Apollo Iron and Steel company.

A provision of the deed is that "for a term of 99 years from date no malt, vinous or spiritous liquors shall be sold on this property."

Under its terms, property on which that clause is violated would revert to the original owners.

CLEVELAND, LOUISVILLE IN SEMI-FINALS

Leavittsburg, Favorite In Girl Passers' Tournament.

The Cleveland Pat Youngs and the Louisville, Ky., Eppings advanced into the semi-finals of the third annual Tri-State girls' basketball tournament by scoring victories in second round engagements today at the high school gym.

The Pat Youngs, using second stringers most of the time, thumped the Cuyahoga Falls R. A. C. Rubber quint 32 to 12. The Kentucky combine edged the Struthers Boosters in the tournament's best game, 18-16. Both Struthers and Cuyahoga drew first round byes.

Title Battle Tonight.

The other semi-finalists will be determined this afternoon when Leavittsburgh meets the Zanesville Zane Co-Eds at 3:10 and the East Liverpool Merchants tackle the Dayton Purol Peps at 2:50. The winner of the East Liverpool-Dayton clash plays the Pat Youngs in one semi-final tonight at 7:20. The other semi-final offering will pit Louisville against the winner of the Leavittsburg-Zanesville battle.

The dope pointed to a championship fray between the Pat Youngs and Leavittsburg, defending champs, tonight. Leavittsburg was not expected to have much trouble with Zanesville, while the Pat Youngs were figured better than either the Dayton or East Liverpool clubs.

There were only two tilts this morning, while five games were booked this afternoon, starting at 1:30. Three of the latter frays will take place in the consolation series, being played between teams eliminated in the first round. Tonight's four games start at 7, with the championship battle booked for 10.

Two Morning Battles

The Struthers-Louisville clash was hard-fought from the start. Louisville led 8-6 at the first quarter, while the count was deadlocked at 10-10 at half-time. The Eppings led, 14-12 at the end of the third period. Walsh and Bruckner of Louisville and Koma and Fitzpatrick, Struthers forwards, scored six points each. A feature of the clash was that not a single free throw was converted. Fourteen were attempted.

The Pat Youngs, using their first string, rolled up an 18-4 lead in the first half of their battle with Cuyahoga Falls. The Cleveland subs played the entire last half and outscored the losing quint, 14 to 8. Fischlin, Pat Young center, led the scorers with eight points. Hanscombe got six counters for the losers.

Negro at Newport, Ky. Falls from Canoe, Drowns.

By The Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., March 25.—Clean-up workers had everything in readiness today for invasion of metropolitan Cincinnati areas affected by the Ohio river flood but were delayed as the muddy waters took their time in running out.

Wth the rate of fall increasing slightly as the run out continued, more than three and a half feet of flood had disappeared this morning. The approximate stage of 60 feet this morning is expected to drop to 56 feet tomorrow morning, still four feet above flood stage.

Slow though the decline was last night and yesterday, the fall permitted resumption of traffic and communication lines and allowed relief work to proceed at greater speed.

All main roads in the affected area are open to traffic again Street cars, taken off the Central bridge, from Newport to Cincinnati, because of high water at the Ohio end, resumed use of the bridge yesterday.

The flood claimed its first victim in Newport, Ky., last night when Harry McConico, 45, Negro, fell from a canoe and drowned.

CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT WINS FAVOR

"Lost" Constitutional Plan Comes Back To Life.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25 — A "lost" constitutional amendment has come back to life, competing in a small way with the proposal for repeal of the 18th amendment.

The revived one is the plan to outlaw exploitation of child labor, proposed by congress nine years ago, approved until this year by six states, rejected by 26.

It was an outcast step-child, virtually abandoned despite the fact that congress placed no time limit for its ratification, because it seemed impossible to swing back enough states to make up the necessary 36.

Then surprisingly this year Oregon ratified, and Washington and North Dakota. The latter had been a rejector.

This week Ohio's legislature ratified, and then the supporters of the lost amendment sat up in earnest.

States Amendment Conscious

Perhaps the overwhelming ratification in less than a year of the lame duck amendment, approved by every state so far but Florida, Maryland and Verment, had something to do with making the states amendment conscious.

They certainly have been conscious this year as to the prohibition amendment. To date 15 have provided for ratifying conventions, seven of them having already set dates. Legislation for ratification is pending in 23 more.

But the foes of child labor, the steady workers against sweatshop exploitation of minors, give much of the credit for revived interest in their amendment to Frances Perkins.

With others she, who is now secretary of labor, reported to a child labor conference in Washington last November a return of revolting conditions of employment in many industrial sections.

U. S. SEEKS TO REVIVE TRADE

Governmental Leaders Meet Great Britain's Representatives in First Of Series of Conferences.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25—Out of the Roosevelt administration's first diplomatic discussion on war debts there emerged today definite indications that the United States will use its position as the greatest creditor nation to obtain international co-operation to break the world depression.

The strategy to be employed took shape at a state department conference yesterday in which the United States talked with first of its war debtors—Great Britain.

Those initial conversations between Secretary Hull of the state department and Ambassador Lindsay of Great Britain will be followed by long and careful negotiations before it can be seen how well the plan will work.

The administration believes the fundamental remedy for present economic conditions lies in international teamwork aimed at reviving world trade. The whole movement to accomplish that end by removal of excessively high tariffs, exchange restrictions and other barriers of trade will reach a climax at the world economic conference to be held in London this summer.

TWO SUSPECTS IN KIDNAPING, ROBBERY HELD

Larimer Stout, James Long Nabbed In Wellsville.

ALCOCK VICTIM

Arrests Aftermath of Auto Wreck in Clarksburg.

Larimer Stout and James Long, both of Danbury avenue, Wellsville, who were arrested Friday at 2:30 p. m., in the latter's home were held to await action of the Columbiana county grand jury under $3,000 bond today by Municipal Judge Harry Brokaw on highway robbery charges in connection with the kidnaping here of Thomas Alcock, also of Wellsville, on Feb. 17.

Both pleaded not guilty at a preliminary hearing today. They will be taken to the county jail.

Arrests Made in Wellsville

The arrests were made by Chief of Police John Fultz of Wellsville, cooperating with Chief of Police Hugh J. McDermott of East Liverpool, as an aftermath of an automobile crash in Clarksburg, W. Va., March 1, when a coupe owned by the prosecuting witness was alleged to have been driven by the suspects. The affidavits were signed by Chief McDermott after Alcock identified the two prisoners.

The suspects were traced to Wellsville after an investigation of the Clarksburg accident by federal authorities.

Alcock testified two youths kidnaped him in his own automobile while he was waiting for a stoplight at West Sixth and Jefferson streets, Feb. 17, as he was enroute to his home in Tenth street, Wellsville, and then drove to Wintersville, near Steubenville, where they tied him to a post in a field with rawhide laces from his shoes, after robbing him of $18.

Identifies Driver of Car.

Remarking, "We'll see you in jail," Alcock said the pair then drove off in his motor car.

He testified Stout drove the machine across the Newell bridge and then along West Virginia state route No. 2 to Weirton, via New Cumberland, and re-crossed the Ohio river to Steubenville, while an accomplice held a pistol against his side.

Alcock made his way to Steubenville police headquarters and reported the kidnaping after freeing himself from his bonds.

BLAME BACKFIRE

Machine Owned By Cuyahoga Falls Man.

A five-ton truck and its shipment of 418 auto tires and 150 boxes of inner tubes, en route from Akron to Baltimore and Washington, was destroyed by fire, causing a loss of $15,000, on Badger's hill, near Eagleton's Glens, Lisbon-Salem road, today at 5:40 a. m.

Henry Dabel, driver, and his brother Ray, helper, of 243 Russell avenue, Akron, received minor injuries when they leaped from the burning truck. One of the men lost his hat and coat in the cab.

The blaze is believed to have been caused when the backfire from the motor ignited gasoline from a broken fuel line.

Tell Us, Shaw!

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 25—Bernard Shaw you let me come to your home in London, talk to you for a long time. I always said I never met a man I didn't like. You would all like Shaw if you met him, that is everybody that is fair and honest with themselves.

You won't be able to figure him out, and that makes the smart fellows sore. He is one cross-word puzzle that has never been worked. Writers' animosity to Shaw is that they didn't think of saying what he had already said. He is away ahead of 'em.

England in all these years don't know if he is for 'em or against 'em, and a fellow Irishman knows no more about him than a Zulu.

Now when a guy can do all that and put it over, give him credit. So viva Bernard, look us over, and don't let our hospitality stand in the way of you telling us just about what cage in the zoo we belong. It's bound to do us some good.

Yours,

Will Rogers

Vandergrift, Pa., Dry For Next 62 Years

By The Associated Press.

VANDERGRIFT, Pa., March 25. — A city of nearly 12,000 persons, Vandergrift, may be destined to remain dry for the next 62 years, even if the 18th amendment is repealed.

The city was founded in 1896 on land deeded to the Vandergrift Land and Improvement company by the old Apollo Iron and Steel company.

A provision of the deed is that "for a term of 99 years from date no malt, vinous or spiritous liquors shall be sold on this property."

Under its terms, property on which that clause is violated would revert to the original owners.

CLEVELAND, LOUISVILLE IN SEMI-FINALS

Leavittsburg Favorite In Girl Passers' Tournament.

The Cleveland Pat Youngs and the Louisville, Ky., Eppings advanced into the semi-finals of the third annual Tri-State girls' basketball tournament by scoring victories in second round engagements today at the high school gym.

The Pat Youngs, using second stringers most of the time, thumped the Cuyahoga Falls R. A. C. Rubber quint—22 to 12. The Kentucky combine edged the Struthers Boosters in the tournament's best game, 18-16. Both Struthers and Cuyahoga drew first round byes.

Title Battle Tonight.

The other semi-finalists will be determined this afternoon when Leavittsburgh meets the Zanesville Zane Co-Eds at 3:10 and the East Liverpool Merchants tackle the Dayton Purol Peps at 2:50. The winner of the East Liverpool-Dayton clash plays the Pat Youngs in one semi-final tonight at 7:20. The other semi-final offering will pit Louisville against the winner of the Leavittsburg-Zanesville battle.

The dope pointed to a championship fray between the Pat Youngs and Leavittsburg, defending champs, tonight. Leavittsburg was not expected to have much trouble with Zanesville, while the Pat Youngs were figured better than either the Dayton or East Liverpool clubs.

There were only two tilts this morning, while five games were booked this afternoon, starting at 1:30. Three of the latter frays will take place in the consolation series, being played between teams eliminated in the first round. Tonight's four games start at 7, with the championship battle booked for 10.

Two Morning Battles

The Struthers-Louisville clash was hard-fought from the start. Louisville led 8-6 at the first quarter, while the count was deadlocked at 10-10 at half-time. The Eppings led, 14-12 at the end of the third period. Walsh and Bruckner of Louisville and Koma and Fitzpatrick, Struthers forwards, scored six points each. A feature of the clash was that not a single free throw was converted. Fourteen were attempted.

The Pat Youngs, using their first string, rolled up an 18-4 lead in the first half of their battle with Cuyahoga Falls. The Cleveland subs played the entire last half and outscored the losing quint, 14 to 8. Fischlin, Pat Young center, led the scorers with eight points. Hanscombe got six counters for the losers.

Negro at Newport, Ky. Falls from Canoe, Drowns.

By The Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, O., March 25.—Clean-up workers had everything in readiness today for invasion of metropolitan Cincinnati areas affected by the Ohio river flood but were delayed as the muddy waters took their time in running out.

Wth the rate of fall increasing slightly as the run out continued, more than three and a half feet of flood had disappeared this morning. The approximate stage of 60 feet this morning is expected to drop to 56 feet tomorrow morning, still four feet above flood stage.

Slow though the decline was last night and yesterday, the fall permitted resumption of traffic and communication lines and allowed relief work to proceed at greater speed.

All main roads in the affected area are open to traffic again Street cars, taken off the Central bridge, from Newport to Cincinnati, because of high water at the Ohio end, resumed use of the bridge yesterday.

The flood claimed its first victim in Newport, Ky., last night when Harry McConico, 45, Negro, fell from a canoe and drowned.

CHILD LABOR AMENDMENT WINS FAVOR

"Lost" Constitutional Plan Comes Back To Life.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25 — A "lost" constitutional amendment has come back to life, competing in a small way with the proposal for repeal of the 18th amendment.

The revived one is the plan to outlaw exploitation of child labor, proposed by congress nine years ago, approved until this year by six states, rejected by 26.

It was an outcast step-child, virtually abandoned despite the fact that congress placed no time limit for its ratification, because it seemed impossible to swing back enough states to make up the necessary 36.

Then surprisingly this year Oregon ratified, and Washington and North Dakota. The latter had been a rejector.

This week Ohio's legislature ratified, and then the supporters of the lost amendment sat up in earnest.

States Amendment Conscious

Perhaps the overwhelming ratification in less than a year of the lame duck amendment, approved by every state so far but Florida, Maryland and Verment, had something to do with making the states amendment conscious.

They certainly have been conscious this year as to the prohibition amendment. To date 15 have provided for ratifying conventions, seven of them having already set dates. Legislation for ratification is pending in 23 more.

But the foes of child labor, the steady workers against sweatshop exploitation of minors, give much of the credit for revived interest in their amendment to Frances Perkins.

With others she, who is now secretary of labor, reported to a child labor conference in Washington last November a return of revolting conditions of employment in many industrial sections.

U. S. SEEKS TO REVIVE TRADE

Governmental Leaders Meet Great Britain's Representatives in First Of Series of Conferences.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25—Out of the Roosevelt administration's first diplomatic discussion on war debts there emerged today definite indications that the United States will use its position as the greatest creditor nation to obtain international co-operation to break the world depression.

The strategy to be employed took shape at a state department conference yesterday in which the United States talked with first of its war debtors—Great Britain.

Those initial conversations between Secretary Hull of the state department and Ambassador Lindsay of Great Britain will be followed by long and careful negotiations before it can be seen how well the plan will work.

The administration believes the fundamental remedy for present economic conditions lies in international teamwork aimed at reviving world trade. The whole movement to accomplish that end by removal of excessively high tariffs, exchange restrictions and other barriers of trade will reach a climax at the world economic conference to be held in London this summer.

TWO SUSPECTS IN KIDNAPING, ROBBERY HELD

Larimer Stout, James Long Nabbed In Wellsville.

ALCOCK VICTIM

Arrests Aftermath of Auto Wreck in Clarksburg.

Larimer Stout and James Long, both of Danbury avenue, Wellsville, who were arrested Friday at 2:30 p. m., in the latter's home were held to await action of the Columbiana county grand jury under $3,000 bond today by Municipal Judge Harry Brokaw on highway robbery charges in connection with the kidnaping here of Thomas Alcock, also of Wellsville, on Feb. 17.

Both pleaded not guilty at a preliminary hearing today. They will be taken to the county jail.

Arrests Made in Wellsville

The arrests were made by Chief of Police John Fultz of Wellsville, cooperating with Chief of Police Hugh J. McDermott of East Liverpool, as an aftermath of an automobile crash in Clarksburg, W. Va., March 1, when a coupe owned by the prosecuting witness was alleged to have been driven by the suspects. The affidavits were signed by Chief McDermott after Alcock identified the two prisoners.

The suspects were traced to Wellsville after an investigation of the Clarksburg accident by federal authorities.

Alcock testified two youths kidnaped him in his own automobile while he was waiting for a stoplight at West Sixth and Jefferson streets, Feb. 17, as he was enroute to his home in Tenth street, Wellsville, and then drove to Wintersville, near Steubenville, where they tied him to a post in a field with rawhide laces from his shoes, after robbing him of $18.

Identifies Driver of Car.

Remarking, "We'll see you in jail," Alcock said the pair then drove off in his motor car.

He testified Stout drove the machine across the Newell bridge and then along West Virginia state route No. 2 to Weirton, via New Cumberland, and re-crossed the Ohio river to Steubenville, while an accomplice held a pistol against his side.

Alcock made his way to Steubenville police headquarters and reported the kidnaping after freeing himself from his bonds.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., March 25.—Peter Myers Sr., whose 15-year-old son Peter was kidnaped from his home at Masury last Saturday, received a note from the kidnapers last night, saying the boy was safe, he revealed today.

The letter came through the mail, Myers said, and promised that the abductors would get in touch with him again soon. It thanked Myers for calling off the police during a 24-hour "truce" which was arranged yesterday so the abductors would have a clear path to approach the family.

Myers said the letter did not contain the symbolic numbers contained in an original note left by the kidnapers at the time of the abduction, but added he had no doubt that the letter is genuine.

It made no demand for ransom. The note follows:

"Mr. Myers. We are glad you called the law and newspapermen off. We will get in touch with you as soon as possible. Pete is safe. Keep this quiet. (Signed) The Abductors."

ANOTHER VICTIM CLAIMED BY CLEVELAND LIQUOR WAR

SHOTGUN FIRED IN WINDOW OF MOVING AUTO

Joseph Orsina, Aged 35, Killed by Gunmen.

BOYS IN DANGER

Slayers Drive Aways In Sedan After Attack.

By The Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, March 25.—A shotgun poked through a window of a slow moving automobile spurted death for Joseph Orsina, 35, last night and added another victim to the long drawn-out East Side liquor war.

Douglass and Dovie Shell, 12-year-old twins, narrowly escaped possible injury. They had been playing tag around Orsina's parked car, they told police, and had stepped away when he came out of a fruit store.

A shot rang out. Turning, they saw Orsina raise his hand to his head and slump to the ground, groaning.

Across the street, a blue sedan rolled lazily. The gun barrel was projected from the window. Another shot. The boys fled, without an effort to determine the number of men in the car or the machine's license number.

Mrs. Josephine Orsina, the slain man's widow, was quoted by police as saying her husband had been selling corn liquor. She said she did not know whether he acted independently or through an organization.

POTTERY SHOW DRAWS CROWDS

Ceramic Display Completes Week In New York.

The Ceramic display, sponsored by the United States Potters' association, aided by the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, which shows the various steps in the manufacture of dinnerware by American methods, created unusual interest in New York City this week, where it was shown in Macy's department store in Broadway, W. Edwin Wells of Newell, president of the Potters' association, said today.

The exhibit has drawn larger crowds than any display of its kind in New York in recent years, Wells said. Marion Shively of East Liverpool, and a group of pottery workers selected from the Trenton, N. J., district, have conducted demonstrations in the large store each day this week.

On Monday, the exhibit will open a week's display at a large department store in Brooklyn, N. Y., and on Monday, April 3, it will be removed to Gimbel's department store in Philadelphia, where it will be shown for a week. During the week of April 10 it will be shown in Washington, D. C., and for the week of April 17 it will be displayed at Baltimore, Md.

The exhibit will be returned to Newell following the display at Baltimore, Wells said. Louis K. Friedman of Pittsburgh, secretary-treasurer of the Homer Laughlin China company of Newell, is in charge of the display.

KIWANIS CLUB HEARS BUZZARD

Attorney Discusses Jury System At Luncheon Meet.

Forms of ancient law, the forerunner of the present day judiciary system, were discussed by Attorney Raymond Buzzard in an address on "Historic Injustices," at this week's luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis club in the banquet hall of the Travelers' hotel. He was introduced by Attorney Walter B. Hill.

Preceding the address, Robert Brown, manager of the Pennzoil gasoline station here, was admitted to membership. The ceremonies were conducted by R. C. Heddleston, who presided, and B. G. Ludwig who welcomed him into the club. Brown was presented by T. H. Larkins.

A feature of the program was a vocal solo by Wilbur Glenn, accompanied by Clair Chambers.

Buzzard said in part:

"Today we are guaranteed recourse to legal advice and a trial by jury and are not subjected to persecution when brought before the bar of justice. This has not always been so.

"As early as the year 15 B. C. are to be found records of ordeal by fire, water and other methods, which persisted up until the 17th century. All were based on the belief that God watched over the innocent and protected them from harm. The suspects later were given an opportunity to choose trial by God or trial by country—the latter form of jury trial—which was just coming into vogue.

"In 1219 a rough form of jury trial was inaugurated and in 1275 judges were permitted to impose penalties againts persons who failed to make a plea. English law in 1827 provided that upon a plea of not guilty a time for trial would be set, and this method is followed largely in the United States today."

Francis Lang was a guest.

OHIO REDRAFTS BEER BILL FOR SENATE VOTE

House Action May Be Deferred Until Saturday.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., March 25. — Ohio's beer bill was being redrafted again today—for the sixth time since it was placed in the hands of a senate committee for study.

Assistant Senate Clerk Edward P. Gibson was busy redrafting the measure, inserting amendments worked out by Senator Joseph N. Ackerman, its sponsor, Lieutenant Governor Charles Sawyer and others.

The redraft will be presented to the senate judiciary committe for its consideration again Monday afternoon, and indications are it will not reach a vote in the senate until late Tuesday. If the senate adopts the measure that day, it will then go to the house. Action by the house may come by late Thursday, but the possibility that amendments will be offered there throws final action on the bill over to Saturday, April 1, and probably not until early the following week.

State Control Provided.

Notwithstanding the numerous amendments which have been made, the bill in substance has not been changed materially. It still seeks to carry out in detail the recommendations of the governor's special beer commission covering sale and distribution.

As the measure now stands, it contains no inhibition against sale to minors and permits retail sale on Sundays and election days inasmuch as the new beverage is supposed to be non-intoxicating.

Its salient points provide for a state control commission of seven members to be appointed by the governor at salaries of $1,200 a year and expenses. Not more than four would be from one popitical party and senate confirmation of their appointment would be necessary. This commission would have virtually dictatorial powers in licensing those who would handle beer either wholesale or retail.

"Near beer" which has been the piece de resistance of the thirsty when "home brew" was unavailable, probably will be forced into complete oblivion by the new 3.2 per cent beer.

"Home Brew" Illegal.

But "home brew" will be just as illegal as it has been all these years and unless the new beer fills the bill of the thirsty, some believe the home product probably will continue to be made on a large scale.

Under provisions of the proposed law, even in its latest draft, "near beer' will be subject to the same tax of $1 per barrel as the new beer.

"Near beer" and any cereal beverage containing less than 3.2 per cent of alcohol will be subject to the tax. "Near beer" is supposed to contain less than one-half of one per cent of alcohol. Licenses will be required to sell "near beer" or any other cereal beverage with alcoholic content. Its sale also will be restricted to those places permitted to sell the new full strength product.

Branch Offices Permitted.

Branch offices may be established by the commission wherever it deems necessary to handle the business. No authority is given these branch offices, however, to issue permits or licenses, these being issued only by the commission at its main office in the capitol.

The proposed tax of $1 per barrel of 31 gallons is to be paid by the brewer or the brewer's agent handling the product.

Four classes of permits are to be issued. One is for the brewer, who must pay for his permit at the rate of $1,000 for the first 5,000 barrels or less capacity of the plant and five cents for each additional barrel produced in excess of 5,000 barrels. The second class of permits is for the wholesale distributor, who would pay a flat license fee of $1,500 a year.

The third class is for the retail stores which handle only bottled goods not to be drunk on the premises. The bottled goods would be sold in packages of not less than six bottles of 12 ounces each or total quantities of 48 bottles. This permit would cost $50 annually. The fourth permit costing $100, would be to hotels, restaurants, clubs and amusement parks, where the beer may be sold either in glass or bottle and served only at tables.

Permits For U. S. Citizens.

Only citizens of the United States would be given retail permits and no person or corporation having an interest in any brewery or the wholesaling of beer would be permitted to hold a retail license for restaurants, hotels, clubs or parks. Any permit may be revoked by the commission for violation of rules or for conviction of a felony.

Revenues derived both from the tax and the permit fees, which are estimated at about $3,000 a year, are to be paid into the state treasury, one half going to the state's general revenue fund and the other half to be distributed back to the municipalities or other taxing subdivisions in proportion to the total revenues received from the subdivision.

Local Option Clause Inserted.

While the law, if enacted, will be operative at first throughout the entire state, any city, village, township, part of township or a county, can call a local option election to decide whether sale shall be prohibited within their bounds. The election would be called by petition of 25 per cent of the electors; and would be held at the next regular election, following the filing of the petition, providing they are filed not less than 60 days before the election. Should the voters decide to prohibit the sale of beer, this prohibition would remain in effect until changed at a later election.

Violation of the provision of the law should subject the offender to a fine of $100 to $1,000 or imprisonment of 30 days to six months or both.

The bill also would amend the Crabbe prohibition law raising the alcoholic content from one-half of one percent to 3.2 per cent alcoholic content by weight.

Until the Ohio beer bill is passed and becomes law, the prohibition status in the state remains exactly as it has for years.

COURT REFUSES TO REDUCE BAIL

Akron Man, Charged with Salem Hold-up, Must Post $7,500 to Obtain Freedom.

LISBON—An effort to have the $7,500 bail of James LaFatch of Akron reduced through an order of Judge W. F. Lones failed.

LaFatch is charged with being one of three men who robbed the Peoples Drug Store at Salem early this week, $80 being taken from the cash register. He has been committed to the county jail in default of bond, and his case will go before the April grand jury which convenes April 17.

It is also possible that the grand jury will investigate the robbery last December of the Peoples Drug Store at East Liverpool.

CHARGE ABUSE ON FEDERAL DAM PROJECTS

Labor Aids Investigate Claims of Veterns.

State and federal labor authorities today are investigating alleged discrimination against World War veterans and other abuses, including the purported charging of exorbitant prices by commissaries, in connection with the construction of dams in the Ohio and Allegheny rivers, Attorney H. Stewart Dunn and Ronald Thompson, representatives of the Allegheny County American Legion organization, said today.

J. W. Borland, Pittsburgh, mediator for the Pennsylvania department of labor, was told that so-called "floaters" and non-community residents are given a majority of the jobs.

At the Montgomery Island site a large number of Beaver county residents have been employed, while non-resident workmen are skilled laborers, engineers, foremen and officials of the Booth and Flinn company, general contractors, it was said.

Laborers are paid 30 cents an hour, this having been increased from 25 cents in January, Borland said.

WELLSVILLE STREET JOB IS DOUBTFUL

Main Street Work Awaits Word From Columbus.

Wellsville citizens interested in the improvement of Main street during the coming summer are awaiting action of the state highway department.

Several months ago a committee visited State Highway Director O. W. Merrell and were told that while the street was one of the major jobs listed it would depend entirely on how much money was diverted from the gasoline tax fund by the legislature if it was to be advanced.

Since then engineers from Merrell's office have made a survey from Third to Seventeenth streets while blue prints are being worked out in the office of the county surveyor at Lisbon.

The suggested plans call for a concrete base and brick surface following along lines of the Clark avenue improvement.

Lones against William Fawcett of Lisbon for the death of Lawrence Vitalune, a youth who died from injuries sustained when a truck driven by Faucett overturned near Kensington enroute to Lisbon last fall with a load of young people returning from a football game at Minerva.

The suit was filed by Frances Vitalune, father of the youth. Fawcett was not in court, and had no counsel to represent him. A jury trial was waived, and after the introduction of some testimony, the judgment was entered.

ANOTHER VICTIM CLAIMED BY CLEVELAND LIQUOR WAR

SHOTGUN FIRED IN WINDOW OF MOVING AUTO

Joseph Orsina, Aged 35, Killed by Gunmen.

BOYS IN DANGER

Slayers Drive Aways In Sedan After Attack.

By The Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, March 25.—A shotgun poked through a window of a slow moving automobile spurted death for Joseph Orsina, 35, last night and added another victim to the long drawn-out East Side liquor war.

Douglass and Dovie Shell, 12-year-old twins, narrowly escaped possible injury. They had been playing tag around Orsina's parked car, they told police, and had stepped away when he came out of a fruit store.

A shot rang out. Turning, they saw Orsina raise his hand to his head and slump to the ground, groaning.

Across the street, a blue sedan rolled lazily. The gun barrel was projected from the window. Another shot. The boys fled, without an effort to determine the number of men in the car or the machine's license number.

Mrs. Josephine Orsina, the slain man's widow, was quoted by police as saying her husband had been selling corn liquor. She said she did not know whether he acted independently or through an organization.

POTTERY SHOW DRAWS CROWDS

Ceramic Display Completes Week In New York.

The Ceramic display, sponsored by the United States Potters' association, aided by the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters, which shows the various steps in the manufacture of dinnerware by American methods, created unusual interest in New York City this week, where it was shown in Macy's department store in Broadway, W. Edwin Wells of Newell, president of the Potters' association, said today.

The exhibit has drawn larger crowds than any display of its kind in New York in recent years, Wells said. Marion Shively of East Liverpool, and a group of pottery workers selected from the Trenton, N. J., district, have conducted demonstrations in the large store each day this week.

On Monday, the exhibit will open a week's display at a large department store in Brooklyn, N. Y., and on Monday, April 3, it will be removed to Gimbel's department store in Philadelphia, where it will be shown for a week. During the week of April 10 it will be shown in Washington, D. C., and for the week of April 17 it will be displayed at Baltimore, Md.

The exhibit will be returned to Newell following the display at Baltimore, Wells said. Louis K. Friedman of Pittsburgh, secretary-treasurer of the Homer Laughlin China company of Newell, is in charge of the display.

REV. BUTLER UNION SPEAKER

Rev. John H. Butler, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, will preach at the union services Sunday at 4 p. m., in the United Presbyterian church of Wellsville. Music will be in charge of the church choir.

This will be the last united service of the season.

MINSTREL TO BE GIVEN BY CHESTER CLUB

Helping Hand Club Plans Benefit in April.

Dennis R. Linger, president of the Chester Helping Hand club, today announced plans for a benefit minstrel show, which will be presented at the city hall in Carolina avenue in April, under the auspices of the club. A date for the show has not been selected.

The program, Linger said, will include several vaudeville acts and a full length minstrel by a cast of about 30 persons, all residents of Chester, Newell or East Liverpool. John Coleman of East Liverpool will assemble the cast and direct the show.

A meeting of the officials will be held early next week to complete plans for the ticket sale, and other arrangements for the show. Linger will appoint a general committee at that time. Proceeds of the affair will be used in welfare work.

The Helping Hand club was organized two years ago for the purpose of providing medical and surgical care for needy crippled persons. During the last year the club has also assisted in general relief work in the Chester zone. Last year at Christmas they provided baskets of food for about 50 needy families, while on Christmas, 1931, the club entertained more than 100 children with a dinner, and presented them with fruit, toys and clothing.

COLUMBUS, O., March 25. — Ohio's beer bill was being redrafted again today—for the sixth time since it was placed in the hands of a senate committee for study.

Assistant Senate Clerk Edward P. Gibson was busy redrafting the measure, inserting amendments worked out by Senator Joseph N. Ackerman, its sponsor, Lieutenant Governor Charles Sawyer and others.

The redraft will be presented to the senate judiciary committe for its consideration again Monday afternoon, and indications are it will not reach a vote in the senate until late Tuesday. If the senate adopts the measure that day, it will then go to the house. Action by the house may come by late Thursday, but the possibility that amendments will be offered there throws final action on the bill over to Saturday, April 1, and probably not until early the following week.

State Control Provided.

Notwithstanding the numerous amendments which have been made, the bill in substance has not been changed materially. It still seeks to carry out in detail the recommendations of the governor's special beer commission covering sale and distribution.

As the measure now stands, it contains no inhibition against sale to minors and permits retail sale on Sundays and election days inasmuch as the new beverage is supposed to be non-intoxicating.

Its salient points provide for a state control commission of seven members to be appointed by the governor at salaries of $1,200 a year and expenses. Not more than four would be from one popitical party and senate confirmation of their appointment would be necessary. This commission would have virtually dictatorial powers in licensing those who would handle beer either wholesale or retail.

"Near beer" which has been the piece de resistance of the thirsty when "home brew" was unavailable, probably will be forced into complete oblivion by the new 3.2 per cent beer.

"Home Brew" Illegal.

But "home brew" will be just as illegal as it has been all these years and unless the new beer fills the bill of the thirsty, some believe the home product probably will continue to be made on a large scale.

Under provisions of the proposed law, even in its latest draft, "near beer' will be subject to the same tax of $1 per barrel as the new beer.

"Near beer" and any cereal beverage containing less than 3.2 per cent of alcohol will be subject to the tax. "Near beer" is supposed to contain less than one-half of one per cent of alcohol. Licenses will be required to sell "near beer" or any other cereal beverage with alcoholic content. Its sale also will be restricted to those places permitted to sell the new full strength product.

Branch Offices Permitted.

Branch offices may be established by the commission wherever it deems necessary to handle the business. No authority is given these branch offices, however, to issue permits or licenses, these being issued only by the commission at its main office in the capitol.

The proposed tax of $1 per barrel of 31 gallons is to be paid by the brewer or the brewer's agent handling the product.

Four classes of permits are to be issued. One is for the brewer, who must pay for his permit at the rate of $1,000 for the first 5,000 barrels or less capacity of the plant and five cents for each additional barrel produced in excess of 5,000 barrels. The second class of permits is for the wholesale distributor, who would pay a flat license fee of $1,500 a year.

The third class is for the retail stores which handle only bottled goods not to be drunk on the premises. The bottled goods would be sold in packages of not less than six bottles of 12 ounces each or total quantities of 48 bottles. This permit would cost $50 annually. The fourth permit costing $100, would be to hotels, restaurants, clubs and amusement parks, where the beer may be sold either in glass or bottle and served only at tables.

Permits For U. S. Citizens.

Only citizens of the United States would be given retail permits and no person or corporation having an interest in any brewery or the wholesaling of beer would be permitted to hold a retail license for restaurants, hotels, clubs or parks. Any permit may be revoked by the commission for violation of rules or for conviction of a felony.

Revenues derived both from the tax and the permit fees, which are estimated at about $3,000 a year, are to be paid into the state treasury, one half going to the state's general revenue fund and the other half to be distributed back to the municipalities or other taxing subdivisions in proportion to the total revenues received from the subdivision.

Local Option Clause Inserted.

While the law, if enacted, will be operative at first throughout the entire state, any city, village, township, part of township or a county, can call a local option election to decide whether sale shall be prohibited within their bounds. The election would be called by petition of 25 per cent of the electors; and would be held at the next regular election, following the filing of the petition, providing they are filed not less than 60 days before the election. Should the voters decide to prohibit the sale of beer, this prohibition would remain in effect until changed at a later election.

Violation of the provision of the law should subject the offender to a fine of $100 to $1,000 or imprisonment of 30 days to six months or both.

The bill also would amend the Crabbe prohibition law raising the alcoholic content from one-half of one percent to 3.2 per cent alcoholic content by weight.

Until the Ohio beer bill is passed and becomes law, the prohibition status in the state remains exactly as it has for years.

WELLSVILLE STREET JOB IS DOUBTFUL

Main Street Work Awaits Word From Columbus.

Wellsville citizens interested in the improvement of Main street during the coming summer are awaiting action of the state highway department.

Several months ago a committee visited State Highway Director O. W. Merrell and were told that while the street was one of the major jobs listed it would depend entirely on how much money was diverted from the gasoline tax fund by the legislature if it was to be advanced.

Since then engineers from Merrell's office have made a survey from Third to Seventeenth streets while blue prints are being worked out in the office of the county surveyor at Lisbon.

The suggested plans call for a concrete base and brick surface following along lines of the Clark avenue improvement.

VALIANT DUST

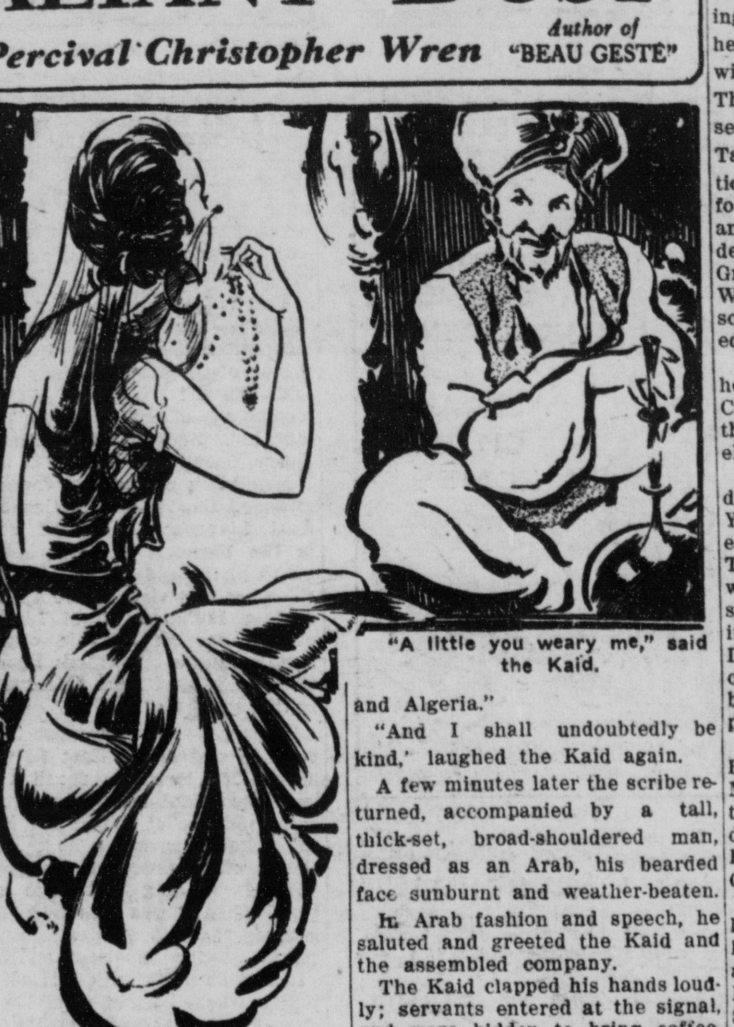
Author of "BEAU GESTE"



"A little you weary me," said the Kaid.

SYNOPSIS: Intrigue seethes in the Citadel of Mekazzen, near which Major Napoleon Riccoli of the Foreign Legion plots treason to France. Margaret Maligni sees her husband, Jules, slipping away from her and Raisul, cruel and spoiled son of the Kaid of Mekazzen, growing more attentive. Margaret does not know that her girlhood sweetheart, Otho Belleme, is a private in the Command of Riccoli, nor that Jules' mother resents her presence in Mekazzen.

Chapter 16.

THE JOLLY KAID

THE Kaid Abd'allah Karim seated upon his cushions in the Lady Zainub's chamber, laughed merrily his famous laugh, that hearty, deep-chested, full-throated laugh which shook him from head to foot, and which so rarely inspired a sense of amusement and inclination to laughter, in the hearer.

"Ha, ha, thou Desired of Emperors, thou Moon of my Delight that know'st no wane, what saith the Prophet Himself (on whom be peace)—and he, Allah witness, knew something of women—what saith he?"

"Well, what does he say?" inquired the Lady Zainub, humoring, her lord with smiles, and wondering whether, in the end, he would stick a knife in her, or have her thrown from the battlements in a sack. Better that, perhaps, than grow old, and wither in neglect.

"What saith he on that interesting subject, my love?" chuckled the Kaid. "Llisten and hear. He said:

"Oh, ye assembly of women, give alms, yea, though it be of your ornaments of gold and silver, for verily ye are mostly for Hell on the Day of Judgment," and the jolly Kaid again roared with laughter.

The Lady Zainub sniffed.

"Well, meantime, you listen to wh[illegible] say, and so the further postpone your own day of judgment. Beware of this Jules Maligni, son of your servant and of your sister. Why has Pedro Maligni brought him here?"

"To learn to be, in his turn, my trusted agent and servant and friend, and those of Raisul, my son. As Pedro Maligni's father was to my father—on whom be peace—and as Pedro Maligni has been to me, so shall Pedro Maligni's son be to my son, a devoted and faithful. . ."

"Faithful perhaps," sneered the Lady Zainub.

"And when has Pedro Maligni been less than faithful; given me anything but good service; true and full information; the best rifles that . . ."

"At a price," again sneered the Lady Zainub.

"At a price, woman? And who does anything save at a price? Should he risk death or imprisonment for nothing? Did not Pedro's father bring Pedro here, that he might know and serve me, even as Pedro has brought his son that I . . ."

"Beware of that son, I say," repeated the woman doggedly.

"I heard you—twice and thrice I heard you—oh Delight of Mine Eyes. Do not become the Abhorrence of Mine Ears. A little you weary me."

And the Kaid rose to his feet.

"[illegible] not well to weary me," he added mildly, and the Lady Zainub shivered slightly at her husband's kindly tone.

Casting herself at his feet, she begged her lord to be seated, promising him amendment, obedience, and great entertainment.

But remarking that, although he had intended to stay for the remainder of the day, he was constrained by her distressing wearisomeness to leave it, the Kaid strode away, for he had an important engagement.

Thus it was a moment not more than an hour later than the time appointed, that he entered his council chamber, attended by his son, Raisul; his friend and agent, the Senor Pedro Maligni; his agent's son. Mr. Jules Maligni; his confidential scribe and secretary, Abu Talib Zerhoun; mighty Ibrahom the Lion, his gigantic bodyguard; and the stern and stalwart commander-in-chief of his fighting men, Mahommed Ali el Amin, Mahommed the Trustworthy, Mahommed the Reliable.

Seating himself on a handsome, if somewhat dirty, divan, the Kaid courteously signified his pleasure that the others should be seated also, and bade Abu Talib, the scribe, go and inform the visitor who had arrived yesterday (on Senor Pedro Maligni's recommendation and personal guarantee), that the Kaid sat in audience, and would receive him.

"'To strangers and wayfarers be kind,' saith the Koran," observed the Kaid, and laughed meaningly.

"He is undoubtedly a stranger—and something of a wayfarer by now," smiled Pedro Maligni "as he has come deviously hither from Germany by way of Egypt, Tunis and Algeria."

"And I shall undoubtedly be kind,' laughed the Kaid again.

A few minutes later the scribe returned, accompanied by a tall, thick-set, broad-shouldered man, dressed as an Arab, his bearded face sunburnt and weather-beaten.

In Arab fashion and speech, he saluted and greeted the Kaid and the assembled company.

The Kaid clapped his hands loudly; servants entered at the signal, and were bidden to bring coffee, mint-tea and cigarets.

"Perhaps, being a foreigner, our guest would prefer strong drink of the foreigners?" inquired the Kaid courteously.

The stranger signified that he would be loath to offend his host's eyes and delicate nostrils with the sight and scent of the forbidden and abhorrent drink.

The Kaid laughed merrily, and the stranger eyed him thoughtfully the while.

"Well," said the Kaid, "as to that, I can bear it, I can bear it. In fact, to speak the truth—which is ever pleasant and natural to my lips—I have tasted it. Yea, sometimes I drink it. . . And yet, on the other hand, I do not drink it, I never drink it."

"A hard saying. Lord Kaid," mused the stranger. "A riddle, in fact."

"Yes," agreed the Kaid. "The solution of the riddle being that my Holy Mullah, most pious and learned man in Mekazzen—yea, in all the country—yea, in all Mogreb—blesses it, and straightaway it turns to milk in my mouth!

"Let us drink milk," he added.

In the ensuing conversation and negotiation, the Kaid showed himself the keen man of business—the business of war—the heridity, training, and environment had made him.

The visitor or emissary, on the other hand, proved less competent and, on the few points upon which they differed, was, without great difficulty, outmanoeuvred, overborne and defeated.

Plot and counterplot continues, Monday, in the grim Citadel of Mekazzen.

THE THEATER

COLUMBIA.

"Island of Lost Souls" movie version of H. G. Wells' eerie adventure story comes to the Columbia theater Sunday with a cast headed by Charles Laughton, Bela Lugosi, Richard Arlen, Leila Hyams and Kathleen Burke who was chosen as the "Panther Woman" from among 60,000 competitors in a nation-wide contest.

The story centers around a skilled scientist who has become half-mad because of his fanatical desire to create men out of beasts. Outlawed from civilized countries, he has set up headquarters on a remote South Seas island, where he has succeeded in transforming apes, dogs, lions and other animals into new creatures, resembling men, able even to talk like men.

A shipwrecked American is rescued and given shelter on the doctor's island. There he is horrified at the beast-men; shocked beyond endurance when he discovers Lota, a beauteous young girl, is really another of the madman's creations.

Aid reaches him on the island when his sweetheart charters a vessel and rushes to the scene. But their escape is blocked, and their lives endangered, when the beast men taste blood for the first time, and turn on their creator. The revolt and the attempt at escape bring the picture to a dramatic climax.

Charles Laughton plays the role of the mad doctor; Richard Arlen, the American; Leila Hyams, his sweetheart; Lugosi, leader of the beast men, and Miss Burke, the "Panther Woman."

CERAMIC.

The hilarious adventures of a couple of riveters who liked to climb high in the world so that their range of vision for the ladies would be increased provide a basis for "Fast Workers," which brings John Gilbert to the Ceramic theater screen starting Sunday in a role that has all the punch and romantic bravado of the unforgettable part in "The Big Parade."

Robert Armstrong is seen as Gilbert's companion throughout a series of thrills on top of skyscrapers and amorous encounters on the ground that lead to a smashing climax.

Gilbert portrays "Gunner," an ace riveter who leads all other hot metal experts on a big skyscraper in a race to completion. Armstrong is his "bucker" or strong-arm man who holds an iron hammer on the back of a rivet so that the metal may be smashed down by the rivet gun. Mae Clarke, who scored in "Waterloo Bridge" and "The Front Page," has the feminine lead as a lady of shady reputation. Muriel Kirkland, who won considerable notice on the New York stage for her performance in "Strictly Dishonorable," is seen as "Millie."

The plot deals with the activities of Gunner and Bucker on high girders and the ladies who provide romantic interest for them on the ground. They have an agreement that when one begins to take a girl seriously, the other can have a chance at her. If he succeeds in compromising her the marriage is off. Bucker meets a girl when Gunner sends him some photographs of himself and the girl taken at a questionable resort, Bucker's anger is deadly. He pushes Gunner from a girder, making the attempt look like an accident. Gunner's fall is broken a few stories down and his life is saved. Bucker discovers that the girl is not worthy of his love and they both invite her to leave.

AMERICAN.

Barbara Stanwick, recently elected the "First Lady of the Screen" in a fan poll conducted by the Chicago Tribune, is the star of a most unusual Warner Bros. picture, "Ladies They Talk About," which opens at the American theater Sunday.

It is a story of women in prison—of their lives—their thoughts—their hopes and loves, written by a woman who was sentenced to San Quentin prison in California, and whose experiences while serving her time, have been made into this movie.

A unique attachment that blossoms into a glowing romance is unfolded. It involves the love of a stalwart young evangelist for an attractive girl bandit and prisoner in San Quentin prison.

Barbara Stanwyck plays the part of the bandit, a new type of role for her, while Preston S. Foster, forsakes his evil ways in pictures, having played heavies for some time, to become her leading man, the evangelist, who eventually sweeps her off her feet with the depth of his love.

The picture reveals life in the women's ward of California's state penitentiary and is based on the actual prison experiences of Dorothy Mackaye, the actress, who was sentenced to the institution after the violent death of her husband. Miss Mackaye, since released, re-married and playing on the stage, is the co-author of the play with Carlton Miles, from which play the picture was adapted by Sidney Sutherland and Brown Holmes.

There is a strong supporting cast which includes Lyle Talbot, Dorothy Burgess, Lillian Roth, Maude Eburne, Harold Huber and Ruth Donnelly. The picture was directed by Howard Bretherton and William Keighley.

STATE.

George Arliss, who returns to the screen at the State theater Sunday in his latest picture for Warner Bros., "The King's Vacation," appears in a role said to be perfectly fitted to his unusual talents, and a story believed to be the finest of all his screen productions.

It has always been a hard task to find stories for Mr. Arliss, as the great star in his later years preferring something with a touch of light comedy to offset the dramatic situations. He insists on highly intelligent pictures, and yet pictures that bring a glow of happiness to the spectator. The present story is quite modern and similar in type to "The Millionaire."

Mr. Pascal first submitted his story to Mr. Arliss last spring, but he was busy with picture work and did not have time to peruse it carefully. Then Mr. Arliss returned to England as he does each spring. Pascal, having business in London, took his script with him and submitted it to Mr. Arliss again. This time he read it carefully and wired to Warner Bros. that he considered it an ideal vehicle, whereupon the story was purchased.

One of the finest casts ever appearing in an Arliss picture, and they are always players of renown on both stage and screen, was assembled for the picture. They include Dick Powell and Patricia Ellis in the juvenile and ingenue roles, two players who have shown marked promise, Powell having made a tremendous hit as the crooner in "Blessed Event," in "42nd Street" and in the Will Rogers' picture, "Too Busy to Work," while Miss Ellis, already well known on the Broadway stage, although but sixteen years old, was groomed for the part in "Central Park" and "Three on a Match."

VALIANT DUST

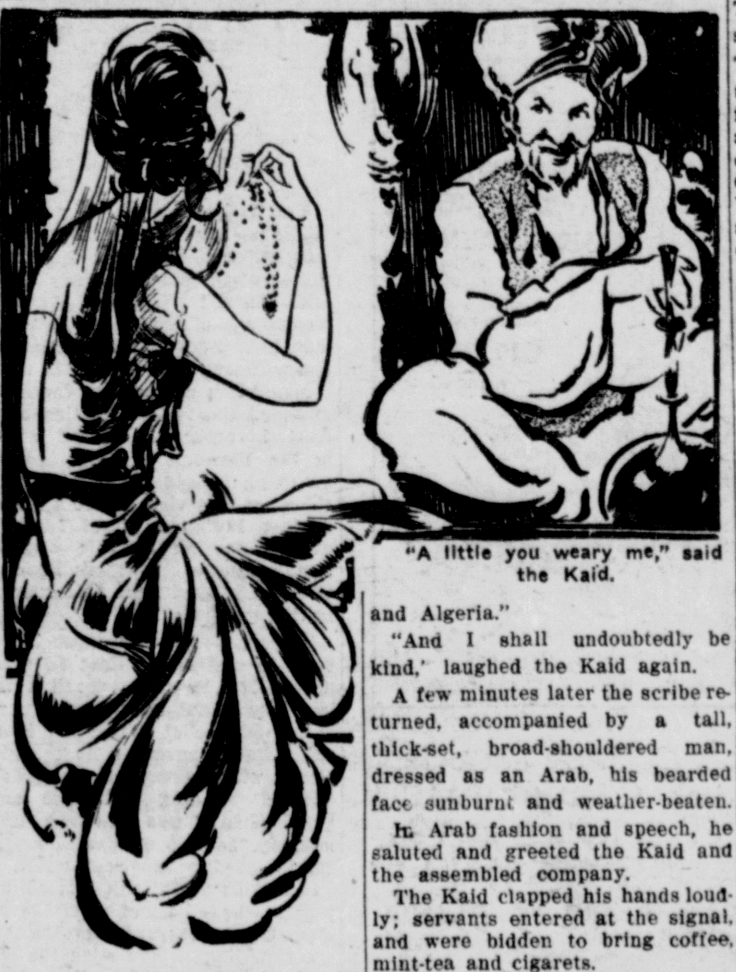
by Percival Christopher Wren

Author of "BEAU GESTE"

SYNOPSIS: Intrigue seethes in the Citadel of Mekazzen, near which Major Napoleon Riccoli of the Foreign Legion plots treason to France. Margaret Maligni sees her husband, Jules, slipping away from her and Raisul, cruel and spoiled son of the Kaid of Mekazzen, growing more attentive. Margaret does not know that her girlhood sweetheart, Otho Belleme, is a private in the Command of Riccoli, nor that Jules' mother resents her presence in Mekazzen.

Chapter 16.

THE JOLLY KAID



"A little you weary me," said the Kaid.

THE Kaid Abd'allah Karim seated upon his cushions in the Lady Zainub's chamber, laughed merrily his famous laugh, that hearty, deep-chested, full-throated laugh which shook him from head to foot, and which so rarely inspired a sense of amusement and inclination to laughter, in the hearer.

"Ha, ha, thou Desired of Emperors, thou Moon of my Delight that know'st no wane, what saith the Prophet Himself (on whom be peace)—and he, Allah witness, knew something of women—what saith he?"

"Well, what does he say?" inquired the Lady Zainub, humoring, her lord with smiles, and wondering whether, in the end, he would stick a knife in her, or have her thrown from the battlements in a sack. Better that, perhaps, than grow old, and wither in neglect.

"What saith he on that interesting subject, my love?" chuckled the Kaid. "Llisten and hear. He said:

"Oh, ye assembly of women, give alms, yea, though it be of your ornaments of gold and silver, for verily ye are mostly for Hell on the Day of Judgment," and the jolly Kaid again roared with laughter.

The Lady Zainub sniffed.

"Well, meantime, you listen to what I say, and so the further postpone your own day of judgment. Beware of this Jules Maligni, son of your servant and of your sister. Why has Pedro Maligni brought him here?"

"To learn to be, in his turn, my trusted agent and servant and friend, and those of Raisul, my son. As Pedro Maligni's father was to my father—on whom be peace—and as Pedro Maligni has been to me, so shall Pedro Maligni's son be to my son, a devoted and faithful. . ."

"Faithful perhaps," sneered the Lady Zainub.

"And when has Pedro Maligni been less than faithful; given me anything but good service; true and full information; the best rifles that . . ."

"At a price," again sneered the Lady Zainub.

"At a price, woman? And who does anything save at a price? Should he risk death or imprisonment for nothing? Did not Pedro's father bring Pedro here, that he might know and serve me, even as Pedro has brought his son that I . . ."

"Beware of that son, I say," repeated the woman doggedly.

"I heard you—twice and thrice I heard you—oh Delight of Mine Eyes. Do not become the Abhorrence of Mine Ears. A little you weary me."

And the Kaid rose to his feet.

"'Tis not well to weary me," he added mildly, and the Lady Zainub shivered slightly at her husband's kindly tone.

Casting herself at his feet, she begged her lord to be seated, promising him amendment, obedience, and great entertainment.

But remarking that, although he had intended to stay for the remainder of the day, he was constrained by her distressing wearisomeness to leave it, the Kaid strode away, for he had an important engagement.

Thus it was a moment not more than an hour later than the time appointed, that he entered his council chamber, attended by his son, Raisul; his friend and agent, the Senor Pedro Maligni; his agent's son. Mr. Jules Maligni; his confidential scribe and secretary, Abu Talib Zerhoun; mighty Ibrahom the Lion, his gigantic bodyguard; and the stern and stalwart commander-in-chief of his fighting men, Mahommed Ali el Amin, Mahommed the Trustworthy, Mahommed the Reliable.

Seating himself on a handsome, if somewhat dirty, divan, the Kaid courteously signified his pleasure that the others should be seated also, and bade Abu Talib, the scribe, go and inform the visitor who had arrived yesterday (on Senor Pedro Maligni's recommendation and personal guarantee), that the Kaid sat in audience, and would receive him.

"'To strangers and wayfarers be kind,' saith the Koran," observed the Kaid, and laughed meaningly.

"He is undoubtedly a stranger—and something of a wayfarer by now," smiled Pedro Maligni "as he has come deviously hither from Germany by way of Egypt, Tunis and Algeria."

"And I shall undoubtedly be kind,' laughed the Kaid again.

A few minutes later the scribe returned, accompanied by a tall, thick-set, broad-shouldered man, dressed as an Arab, his bearded face sunburnt and weather-beaten.

In Arab fashion and speech, he saluted and greeted the Kaid and the assembled company.

The Kaid clapped his hands loudly; servants entered at the signal, and were bidden to bring coffee, mint-tea and cigarets.

"Perhaps, being a foreigner, our guest would prefer strong drink of the foreigners?" inquired the Kaid courteously.

The stranger signified that he would be loath to offend his host's eyes and delicate nostrils with the sight and scent of the forbidden and abhorrent drink.

The Kaid laughed merrily, and the stranger eyed him thoughtfully the while.

"Well," said the Kaid, "as to that, I can bear it, I can bear it. In fact, to speak the truth—which is ever pleasant and natural to my lips—I have tasted it. Yea, sometimes I drink it. . . And yet, on the other hand, I do not drink it, I never drink it."

"A hard saying. Lord Kaid," mused the stranger. "A riddle, in fact."

"Yes," agreed the Kaid. "The solution of the riddle being that my Holy Mullah, most pious and learned man in Mekazzen—yea, in all the country—yea, in all Mogreb—blesses it, and straightaway it turns to milk in my mouth!

"Let us drink milk," he added.

In the ensuing conversation and negotiation, the Kaid showed himself the keen man of business—the business of war—the heridity, training, and environment had made him.

The visitor or emissary, on the other hand, proved less competent and, on the few points upon which they differed, was, without great difficulty, outmanoeuvred, overborne and defeated.

Plot and counterplot continues, Monday, in the grim Citadel of Mekazzen.

COLUMBIA.

"Island of Lost Souls" movie version of H. G. Wells' eerie adventure story comes to the Columbia theater Sunday with a cast headed by Charles Laughton, Bela Lugosi, Richard Arlen, Leila Hyams and Kathleen Burke who was chosen as the "Panther Woman" from among 60,000 competitors in a nation-wide contest.

The story centers around a skilled scientist who has become half-mad because of his fanatical desire to create men out of beasts. Outlawed from civilized countries, he has set up headquarters on a remote South Seas island, where he has succeeded in transforming apes, dogs, lions and other animals into new creatures, resembling men, able even to talk like men.

A shipwrecked American is rescued and given shelter on the doctor's island. There he is horrified at the beast-men; shocked beyond endurance when he discovers Lota, a beauteous young girl, is really another of the madman's creations.

Aid reaches him on the island when his sweetheart charters a vessel and rushes to the scene. But their escape is blocked, and their lives endangered, when the beast men taste blood for the first time, and turn on their creator. The revolt and the attempt at escape bring the picture to a dramatic climax.

Charles Laughton plays the role of the mad doctor; Richard Arlen, the American; Leila Hyams, his sweetheart; Lugosi, leader of the beast men, and Miss Burke, the "Panther Woman."

CERAMIC.

The hilarious adventures of a couple of riveters who liked to climb high in the world so that their range of vision for the ladies would be increased provide a basis for "Fast Workers," which brings John Gilbert to the Ceramic theater screen starting Sunday in a role that has all the punch and romantic bravado of the unforgettable part in "The Big Parade."

Robert Armstrong is seen as Gilbert's companion throughout a series of thrills on top of skyscrapers and amorous encounters on the ground that lead to a smashing climax.

Gilbert portrays "Gunner," an ace riveter who leads all other hot metal experts on a big skyscraper in a race to completion. Armstrong is his "bucker" or strong-arm man who holds an iron hammer on the back of a rivet so that the metal may be smashed down by the rivet gun. Mae Clarke, who scored in "Waterloo Bridge" and "The Front Page" has the feminine lead as a lady of shady reputation. Muriel Kirkland, who won considerable notice on the New York stage for her performance in "Strictly Dishonorable," is seen as "Millie."

The plot deals with the activities of Gunner and Bucker on high girders and the ladies who provide romantic interest for them on the ground. They have an agreement that when one begins to take a girl seriously, the other can have a chance at her. If he succeeds in compromising her the marriage is off. Bucker meets a girl when Gunner sends him some photographs of himself and the girl taken at a questionable resort, Bucker's anger is deadly. He pushes Gunner from a girder, making the attempt look like an accident. Gunner's fall is broken a few stories down and his life is saved. Bucker discovers that the girl is not worthy of his love and they both invite her to leave.

AMERICAN.

Barbara Stanwick, recently elected the "First Lady of the Screen" in a fan poll conducted by the Chicago Tribune, is the star of a most unusual Warner Bros. picture, "Ladies They Talk About," which opens at the American theater Sunday.

It is a story of women in prison—of their lives—their thoughts—their hopes and loves, written by a woman who was sentenced to San Quentin prison in California, and whose experiences while serving her time, have been made into this movie.

A unique attachment that blossoms into a glowing romance is unfolded. It involves the love of a stalwart young evangelist for an attractive girl bandit and prisoner in San Quentin prison.

Barbara Stanwyck plays the part of the bandit, a new type of role for her, while Preston S. Foster, forsakes his evil ways in pictures, having played heavies for some time, to become her leading man, the evangelist, who eventually sweeps her off her feet with the depth of his love.

The picture reveals life in the women's ward of California's state penitentiary and is based on the actual prison experiences of Dorothy Mackaye, the actress, who was sentenced to the institution after the violent death of her husband. Miss Mackaye, since released, re-married and playing on the stage, is the co-author of the play with Carlton Miles, from which play the picture was adapted by Sidney Sutherland and Brown Holmes.

There is a strong supporting cast which includes Lyle Talbot, Dorothy Burgess, Lillian Roth, Maude Eburne, Harold Huber and Ruth Donnelly. The picture was directed by Howard Bretherton and William Keighley.

STATE.

George Arliss, who returns to the screen at the State theater Sunday in his latest picture for Warner Bros., "The King's Vacation," appears in a role said to be perfectly fitted to his unusual talents, and a story believed to be the finest of all his screen productions.

It has always been a hard task to find stories for Mr. Arliss, as the great star in his later years preferring something with a touch of light comedy to offset the dramatic situations. He insists on highly intelligent pictures, and yet pictures that bring a glow of happiness to the spectator. The present story is quite modern and similar in type to "The Millionaire."

Mr. Pascal first submitted his story to Mr. Arliss last spring, but he was busy with picture work and did not have time to peruse it carefully. Then Mr. Arliss returned to England as he does each spring. Pascal, having business in London, took his script with him and submitted it to Mr. Arliss again. This time he read it carefully and wired to Warner Bros. that he considered it an ideal vehicle, whereupon the story was purchased.

One of the finest casts ever appearing in an Arliss picture, and they are always players of renown on both stage and screen, was assembled for the picture. They include Dick Powell and Patricia Ellis in the juvenile and ingenue roles, two players who have shown marked promise, Powell having made a tremendous hit as the crooner in "Blessed Event," in "42nd Street" and in the Will Rogers' picture, "Too Busy to Work," while Miss Ellis, already well known on the Broadway stage, although but sixteen years old, was groomed for the part in "Central Park" and "Three on a Match."

Connie Macks of Girls' Basketball

Unless the unexpected happens as it does at times in world series baseball, a three-time champion will be crowned tonight in the third annual Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky girls' basketball tournament, for the Leavittsburg Athletic club, winner of the 1931 and 1932 titles, seems headed for another victory.

With Susie Sponseller, said to be the greatest feminine passer in the world, at center, the Leavittsburg lassies, who easily downed their opponents in the opening round of the tri-state competition Friday night, are not unlike Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics baseball machine of 1914, which was considered unbeatable until it crashed against the bats of Hank Gowdy and fellow members of the Boston Braves in a championship series.

Although betting odds overwhelmingly favored the Athletics to win the 1914 series, the National leaguers upset the predictions, walked away with the title in four straight games, and prompted the dismantling of the baseball machine which boasted "a $100,000 infield."

Perhaps, it would be well for the Leavittsburg quintet to remember the fate of the American leaguers who made a habit of winning pennants and world championships until the Braves stopped them. And judging from the play in the initial round, the Cleveland Pat Youngs, with Randel and Fischlin, formerly with Leavittsburg, in their lineup, and the Louisville, Ky., Eppings, another strong quintet, may prove to be the Boston Braves of tri-state basketball. The latter clubs appear to be the only quintets to have a chance against the ability of the Sponseller machine which clicks like a championship outfit.

It is a safe wager that it would be well for tri-state tournaments if a dark horse should step into the running for the championship, for the Leavittsburg quintet, with Center Susie in the stellar role, has been making a runaway of the fight during the previous years. And it is the possibility of an upset that will prove a magnet for a capacity crowd at the semi-final, consolation and title clashes tonight.

Who Are the Faithful?

Congressional opposition forming against continuance of President Roosevelt's quick action policy for passage of the major parts of his legislative program prompts this question, which must be answered by the people. Is the country willing to let him continue with the exercise of virtually dictatorial power over congress?

It is no secret that public opinion supporting the President has helped to keep congressmen in line. The economy bill passed the house and senate during the height of the pressure exerted on representatives and senators to give Mr. Roosevelt their support. The bank bill was enacted instantly because opposition would have been fatal. Passage of these two measures would be more difficult now, however, because congressmen are reasserting their right to stand in opposition.

President Roosevelt's agricultural relief bill and the first division of his unemployment relief bill are running into trouble. Instead of being accepted as necessities, their provisions are being questioned critically. Opposition is being offered by both Republicans and Democrats. Congressional reaction against speed at the sacrifice of scrutiny is gaining momentum.

It can be checked by public opinion, if and only if there is an assertion of that opinion equal in vigor to that which forced quick passage of the banking and economy bills. The question is whether or not the people still are willing to support the President in preference to their elected representatives who feel it their duty to oppose his proposals. Undoubtedly, he still is possessor of their confidence. Does he still arouse their enthusiasm?

The answer that is called for by the present circumstances will be given in the actions of congressmen during the remainder of the special session. The administration is sparing no effort to keep the Democratic majority in line. Alone, it hardly can hope to succeed. With the avowed support of the people, however, it cannot fail. Congressmen who doubt that the people favor President Roosevelt against their own selves when it is a question of supporting or opposing emergency legislation from now on face a delicate task of determining the exact specifications of the service they are expected to give. They will find that their constituents do not want them to offer opposition that impedes progress of what they consider to be essential legislation.

Good for the Babe!

Another baseball season is rounding into shape. After the longest holdout of his career, George Herman Ruth has signed his contract, Colonel Ruppert has expressed himself satisfied and everything is ready to go.

"The Babe's position in the big money of baseball is unique. At a time when exorbitantly high salaries are greeted with raised eyebrows, he can go on bargaining in terms of thousands of dollars with enthusiastic approval. He will make $52,000 this year, after taking a $23,000 cut.

He doesn't earn that much; no single man could. But he is worth it, nevertheless. Perhaps it is because the fans realize just how important his reputation is to the Yankee's financial success that they unhesitatingly give him their moral support in his annual battle with the colonel. It seems almost a good joke on the management which has exploited his fame to such great financial advantage.

It is necessary to go back to 1926 to find a year when the most famous baseball star worked in the field and at the plate for so small a sum. Back in 1926, it was worth $52,500 to the Yankees to have Babe Ruth with them. The next three years it was worth $70,000. In 1930 and 1931, although the depression was getting in its dirty work, $80,000 seemed a fair price. Then deflation started and the big fellow had to get along with $75,000. Now it's down to $52,000 he must go, and who knows but next year it may be back to starting prices as a national celebrity—$30,000?

But Slugger Ruth isn't on charity yet. With good luck, he might stay in the game more or less actively for another decade. He has years of life ahead of him and a scant 40 behind him. His profitable years with the Yankees have brought him the petter part of a million dollars and there's more coming. He is at least one great figure of the big business era who still commands the respect of the paying customers. He gave them their money's worth.

The Feminine Touch

Among coming events which will be watched with special interest is the conference of labor leaders called by Secretary of Labor Perkins for the end of this month. Miss Perkins undoubtedly will be on the spot. The labor leaders she will consult with are hard-fisted, practical men whose knowledge of their subject has been picked up in the field of experience. Many of them openly opposed appointment of a woman to a position which they thought they were better qualified to fill.

They will hold it against her that she is a theorist, who never pulled a lever or threw dirt out of a ditch. They will be skeptical of what she, who made her reputation as a social worker, can offer labor in its unending battle against oppression from above and dissension from within. Their courtesy will be put to it to conceal their internal skepicism. It will be her job to win their confidence and respect by showing them she is qualified to represent the new administration's leadership in the field of labor relationship and welfare.

There may be a necessity for some of the established leaders of labor to yield a point here and there to a woman's viewpoint. It seems not unlikely that Miss Perkins will have a good deal to offer which will be of value and which may be accepted without too great a turmoil among the strictly masculine element with which she will be dealing. After all, she is secretary of labor and will continue to hold the job for four years. It will pay to play ball with her.

The incursion of women into administrative positions in government has been slow. Such honors as have been bestowed upon them by the people have lacked the mandate to make policies and exert vigorous leadership. This precedent, broken when President Roosevelt named Miss Perkins as secretary of labor, will be a handicap to her. She has the ideas and a good program. Further than that, she can claim nothing. The country will await anxiously the response to her bid for cooperation. Who knows what wonders the feminine touch may produce in the practical and sometimes rough work of the department of labor?

Postoffice Pens

Presumably, the promise by Silliman Evans, fourth assistant postmaster-general in the staff of the politically capable Mr. Farley, to provide the people of the United States with better postoffice pens is being kept. Democratic eagerness to serve the people in a way they will appreciate when voting time comes again has found a novel outlet.

But leaving partisan politics out of it, one wonders whether the more perfect postoffice pen advocated by Assistant Evans really represent the high type of public service. Is there, perhaps, a legitimate question on the wisdom of giving people so much that they can desire no more? Might there be danger in serving the people to a point of satiety?

The postoffice pen's lack of quality has become a tradition. Professional and amateur jokesters have regarded it as legitimate prey for their avaricious wit for decades. The national sense of humor, responding to their sallies, has made of it one of those minor institutions which all men criticize but continue to regard with kindly tolerance.

In a sense, the deficient writing quality of most of the clogged and battered pens displayed by the department has demonstrated to a population which demands much of its government that there are limitations of service. The pens have symbolized the impossibility of a perfect paternalism. They have said to countless irritated users that there are some things which government cannot provide. They have been a stimulus to private ownership of pens that will write.

In all probability, the inconvenience has been worth the end it unintentionally served. But there is no defense for such vulnerable sectors in the efficiency front, unfortunately. Political parties, striving with each other for favor, must ever seek greater favor with the people. One of them, newly come to power, now will inaugurate the era of the perfect pen, which will represent just one more thing the federal government is anxious to do for taxpayers whose never-ending lamentations keep jobholders on the lookout for new outlets of service.

Any Excuse Will Do

The poundmaster of Duluth—truly a noble title—has done a great humanitarian service which may lose him his job. But he wouldn't care much.

With admirable honesty, he has broken down and confessed that he can't put his heart into dog-catching. It's good steady work with good steady pay, but it's degrading his very life.

The truth is that there's no place in it for a fellow with a heart. Take the nasty business of collecting fees, for instance. When the owner has it, all right. When he doesn't, that's all right, too. At least the poundmaster of Duluth feels that way about it.

As for taking away some soft-eyed mutt whose owner can't ransom him on the spot with ready cash for a license, it's out of the question. And, of course, someone has to see to killing the dogs no one wants. It's no work for human beings.

The compassionate jobholder at Duluth has spoken a thought that thuds home with the sturdy sound of fundamental truth. Dog-catching isn't any kind of work for men with soft places in their hearts. Either they must shirk their duty, adopt the dogs or get reputations as men too mean to live. All three are out of the question.

Therefore, why have dog catchers? Why not abolish the office? Why not make that part of the new deal? The world has waited a long time for a dog-catcher to break right down and admit that he couldn't take it. It needed his confession for an excuse to start action.

New York Day By Day

By O. O. McINTYRE.

NEW YORK, March 25—Around 10 a. m., old nestors of the Bowery upstairs lodging houses seep to the sidewalks. Any number are far from the moochers who gravitate from this boulevard to more prosperous streets. They often are H. G. Wells' "gentlemen descended to poverty." Especially the past two years.

To the practised eye, there still are hints of excellent breeding. Whip-cord old bodies are bent, but there is a set to the head which a prideless beggar never acquires. Something of the "to the manor born." Often, glint of aristocratic fire flashes from rhuemy eyes.

Lodging house "rooms" are mostly piano-box stalls with cots. At night, flickers of light fall from hall gas-jets on blue-veined hands and grey-lined faces. Somewhere about, is a blurred picture—perhaps a faded tintype—with lips that seem to murmur: 'Could I only help!"

They are putterers in a life that has passed them by. Trembly hands fill blackened briars and hold newspapers whose type, save for bold headlines, is too dim to read. Existence settles largely to the state of one's rheumatism. Or the monotony of another sleepless night.

In the Bowery's surprising tumble, one often comes upon a bit of calm. Near Broome street, for instance, I turned into an electrical rapair shop. No one was about and a door in the rear was opened, revealing at a fleeting glance one of the cosiest of living rooms — a jackdaw in a wicker cage, a print of Blue Boy over a brick mantle, a floor of flagging, and an orange cat napping on a rag rug.

Major Raymond Dickson, from the Texas border, was here recently to sit at the bedside of his friend, Thomas Gregory, former attorney general. "When I get a few cockleburrs from behind my ears," he phoned, "I want you to take me to board a little at that place where all the clowns go." I found out he meant the Algonquin, and escorted him. Irvin Cobb awaited him and, looking Dickinson over, archly observed: 'Major, your clothes looked all right to me down at Del Rio."

The Major was telling of an old rancher next to his domain in Mexico who, since the debacle, has been consoling himself in red-eye. "He was trying to make his life and whisky come out even," he explained, "but I'm afraid he is going to outlive his whisky."

A midtown millinery shop is conducted by two fluttery and gardeniaed gentlemen in braided coats, and neatly ruled trousers. They specialize in exotic hats for theatrical ladies. The most expert trimmer is also of male persuasion.

And a Chinese laundry on Lexington avenue bows to the times, with: "Back to old prices—shirts 10 cents, collars 2 cents."

Ed Hill is one of the expert newspaper interviewers who never takes a note. Another grand reporter of a still older school, with a photographic mind, is Ed Howe, who has written entire travel books accurately without jotting down a single incident while journeying. Frank O'Malley, also, was a non-note-taker.

As one of the poor, it has been part of my job to mingle among the sideline spectators of the rich. It occurred to me today that out of a list of 40 such fortunate, I know but two to whom wealth brought happiness. That's confusing.

At a hockey game this winter, I saw, for the first time without his black-face makeup and familiar white linen suit, Jack Powell, one of my major enthusiasms in the entertainment world. He is rarest of artists, a tympanist, who, with a pair of snare drum sticks, rat-atats rhythm that sets audiences atingle. Without orchestral accompaniment, he wanders about beating a tattoo on anything he comes across, from a chair to the tip of a bull fiddle projecting from the pit. It is a fagnificent exploitation of talent over personality.

I asked my wife, after seeing Powell, if she minded if I got a pair or drum sticks to play with around the house, "Not if we are going to keep on going together," she replied.

How To Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND.

NOT long after reaching the age of 30 the average person will put on weight. But to carry too much at this period is a definite stumbling block to good health. Too often the importance of weight is not considered at this time of life and the average person overlooks the necessity of controlling it.

Most persons can blame their overweight on three things: Carelessness in diet, lack of exercise, and improper mode of living. In some instances it can be traced to some glandular disturbance. Overweight which is caused by trouble in the glands appears at an early age and persists regardless of care in diet and exercise.

Many women fear being fat because it is not fashionable. I am sorry to say few fear it because it is a menace to health.

Persons who are overweight are liable to many constitutional diseases, specially diabetes, high blood pressure and gall bladder disease. Heart disease is commonly found in individuals who are overweight. The heart muscle is replaced by fat and that organ becomes flabby and weak, unfit to continue with its work.

Severe Dieting Unwise

There is danger in every fad having to do with the body. Within recent years severe diets for reducing have become popular. They are dangerous and in many instances have resulted in serious ailments. Never starve or go on a special diet unless you have been advised to do so by your physician. It is wise to have a thorough physical examination to determine why you are overweight and whether the condition is caused by some disease.

No matter what the diet may be, it is imperative that certain foods be included in the daily intake. If these so-called "protective foods" are omitted, disability and even disease may result. Milk, leafy vegetables and fresh fruits are among those which are essential. They supply necessary vitamines and minerals needed for health.

Anemia, scurvy, beri-beri and pellegra are a few of the serious disorders that may follow severe dieting in an effort to rdeuce. Too often stout persons exclude the important foods I have mentioned and of course lose weight, but find themselves suffering from some serious disease.

Bear in mind that sudden and rapid loss of weight is dangerous. Restrict the amount of food you eat, tempting any form of exercise contains the necessary proteins, carbohydrates and fats.

Avoid Too Rich Food

Avoid pies, pastries and rich desserts. Get outdoors and walk in the air as much as possible. Lack of a regular amount of exercise leads to overweight. There are many forms of exercise which will help to reduce weight.

Exercise should never be indulged in too strenuously. It is harmful when taken in excess and is dangerous for the obese person who is not accustomed to it. Before attempting any form of exercise consult with your physician.

Overweight is a hindrance to good health and longevity. Neglected overweight becomes more and more difficult to cure. Watch your weight and take the necessary steps to prevent obesity.

DAYBOOK

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON — With so many jobs to hand out and with such a great number of people hungrily eyeing the patronage lists, it has become a matter for speculation as to what technique the Democratic leaders will employ in the method of distribution.

The average person, unless he is looking for a job, might find it difficult to understand just why senators and representatives in such times work themselves up into such a fret over the proposition.

Simply, the answer is that these gentlemen can't help it. They are exposed to the demands of those wanting jobs as never before. They are hounded in their offices. Their daily mail bulges with requests for jobs. And try as they may, they can't escape the fact that the responsibility for filling them is theirs—at least in the eyes of the applicants.

Farley's New Theory

In the light of this, therefore, it is not difficult to understand why, under the surface, "Big Jim" Farley has caused the gentlemen "on the hill" to gnash their teeth of late. Farley, the patronage boss, started out with a new theory in the matter of giving federal jobs.

"Big Jim's" idea, in effect, was that deserving Democrats who wanted a share in the spoils of victory would be certified by the party leaders of the state after consultation with the county leaders.

This meant that the senators and representatives would be deprived of their time-honored prerogative of being consulted before jobs were filled in their states and districts. The singular thing about Farley's idea was that the senate confirms major appointments made by the President.

The distribution had hardly begun, however, before things were changed. A conference at the White House resulted in the word going out that senators would be consulted in appointments affecting their states.

An Instance

Rumor has it that an incident occurred recently "on the hill" which, if true, provides a good illustration of what might continue to happen had the Farley rule been adhered to.

President Roosevelt sent to the senate the name of a Californian for appointment to the shipping board. Senator McAdoo, it is said, had no knowledge of the selection, and was not entirely pleased.

At the moment it appears that senators will have a say in the patronage distribution. But what about the representatives? Some of those gentlemen have very definite ideas on the subject.

Maybe the technique will have to undergo further revision.

WASHINGTON — During the years that Senator "Doc" Copeland of New York has been on Capitol Hill, he has voluntarily taken upon himself the task of safeguarding the health of members of congress.

In the days before the senate installed apparatus for purifying the air in the chamber where sessions are held, the good doctor was constantly warring against almospheric conditions under which senators were compelled to work.

He deplored the lack of sunlight in the chamber. (The senate chamber is so situated that admittance of sunlight is impossible.) He urged that something be done about it, and voiced dire warnings to the senators that their health was being impaired by the absence of ultra-violet rays.

Nor did he confine his activities to the senate.

Air! More Air!

The story is told that one day he visited President Coolidge. Noticing that all the windows were closed, he strode across the room and opened them himself.

"There's not enough fresh air in here, Mr. President," he is said to have remarked. Now that's better."

Now that the Democratic are in control of the senate, Senator Copeland has a job that suits his temperament perfectly. The chairmanship of the rules committee fell to him.

The chairman of the rules committee has under his immediate supervision the senate wing of the capitol and the senate office building. The job of keeping the quarters of senators and the places they frequent during the day in the capitol clean, well ventilated and well-appointed is up to him.

His Duties Varied

He has supervision over the galleries. The muchly-publicized-of-late senator barber shop and bathrooms fall under his jurisdiction. He has charge of the senate restaurant. The delicate and difficult task of assigning office space to senators is also his.

The doctor's job is one which carries with it some times a lot of grief. Some senators are temperamental, highly so.

"Doc" Copeland knows this and already is on guard. The other week-end it became necessary to adjust the electric power facilities in the senate office building. He took the floor of the senate to warn:

"There'll be no elevator service on Sunday, senators. I just wanted to tell you so that there'll be no misunderstanding on the part of those of you who are [illegible] habit of working on Sundays."

The Reviewing Stand

By TOM T. JONES.

PERHAPS the last Indian that was noted within the confines of East Liverpool was the Red brave who made a solitary visit on foot to the hilltop of the Northside just north of the home of Dr. W. H. Hobbs and across the roadway near the spot where later was erected the city reservoir from which a part of the city's drinking supply is obtained.

This Indian was seen by the late William Davidson, father of the late Mitchell Davidson and grandfather of the late Attorney George and Sheriff William Davidson. Knowledge of the visitation of this lone Indian remains in the mind of Harry Peach of West Fifth street.

Mr. Peach was among those who attended the recent meeting of the East Liverpool Historical society in the Carnegie library building. Although he did not relate the incident of this visit of the apparently last Indian to East Liverpool at the session of this organization he did so to others upon his walk homeward from this reorganization gathering.

The numerous references to past days in and about East Liverpool moved Mr. Peach to recall a time in his youthful days when he was in attendance at a meeting in the old school house on East Fourth street which preceded the present Central building upon the same plot. Then it was that he recalled hearing the late William Davidson relate of the meeting which he had had as a lad with this solitary Indian whom he met upon the hilltops, then a far outside section of the rambling village upon the Ohio river below this summit north of the place in which the majority of folks in the locality then lived.

As Mr. Peach recalled the incident related by this pioneer resident it was to the effect that he, then a lad, had a message to deliver or a chore to perform which took him to a point beyond where the Northside now is located. He made the trip on foot. He was proceding leisurely upon his way when suddenly looking up he perceived, sitting on a log, just off the roadway or path upon which he was walking on Indian with his rifle lying across his knees. He was dressed in typical Indian fashion and from his hair protruded long feathers. He loomed an Indian who had wandered momentarily from his band and was gazing about to note what he could see so close to the settlement of white residents.

FOR the moment Mr. Davidson developed a fear that all but prompted him to turn and run back to the nearest home. But he decided that he had a duty to perform and that he was not bent on molesting the Indian, Mr. Peach recalled the narrator as relating. So he determined to go on and pass the Red Man without paying any attention apparently to him.

This he did but naturally he kept a close watch out of the corner of his eye upon the Red man with the gun. The latter, although noting the passing of the boy, set imperturbably in his place. He moved not a muscle. The passing lad did not speak. And the Indian uttered not a sound. In this silence the boy managed to pass the Indian. He moved as rapidly as possible without appearing to run and soon consummated the errand that brought him to this section of the locality near which he lived.

Then he retraced his steps, Mr. Peach recalls Mr. Davidson as saying. He wondered if the feathered Red Man would be in the same spot when he returned. Upon getting into view of the site of his former resting place he discovered that the Indian had silently retreated in the direction whence he had come. None ever came to know who the tawney visitor was, what his purpose had been and to what point he returned.

In days that followed as he grew to manhood Mr. Davidson came to the conclusion that this was doubtless the last armed Red Man to visit the site of what later became East Liverpool. He listened to stories by other residents but none seemed to have seen Indians hereabouts in days later than when he, upon this lone occasion, came upon the Indian sitting upon a log while holding carelessly to the gun which he always carried with him.

The story as related by Mr. Davidson upon this school occasion had marked effect upon the young persons hearing it. It se[illegible] impress more vividly than would be the case in these days that this locality was once the roaming ground of many bodies of Indians as they crossed the Ohio river at the foot of Babb's island and made their way after visiting Rock Springs into sections of western and middle Pennsylvania.

THERE was brought out the fact in this meeting of the East Liverpool Historical society that once upon a time a white dog had served to advertise in a peculiar and quite permanent manner the ice cream which at the moment was being dispensed in a confectionery store which Mr. Peach and his father, the late George Peach, were then maintaining in the Diamond.

Reference to this dog and the incident in which he figured brought a merry smile to the features of Mr. Peach. He later admitted the truthfulness of the story regarding it. There had come to the Peach establishment a rather small dog. None knew where it had been making its former home. It was an unusual appearing dog in that it was all white in color. In [illegible] respect it stood out. It was called "Jack."

About that time there was a bit of emphasis being made upon the ice cream that was being served in this establishment, which gave some young men of the day an idea. This idea took the form of their taking the white-colored dog and painting the words upon its sides in letters of black, "Use Peach's Ice Cream."

These words in black upon a base of white made them stand out. They could be read for a great distance. "Jack" was a friendly dog who indulged in visiting hours upon every day of the week. Indeed, he made the rounds of the town frequently with and without other canines. Always he came back to the establishment to which he had come from apparently nowhere.

All of the time he was, without making any apparent effort to do so, advertising the good qualities of this particular ice cream. "Jack" in this manner became widely known. Everybody seemed to know him. There was a long interim of time that transpired before the elements and the wear and tear of being out in the open caused the black letters upon his sides to become undecipherable.

In the meantime there [illegible] been no damage to the trade in ice cream. "Jack" made his rounds about the town and also while hearing men and women comment as to the identity of those who had thought of such a singular departure that mingled humor with practicability.

Thus "Jack" in part at least served his day and generation well. And now after all of these years men, who were themselves at the time but youths, recalled the incident of how a dog of entirely white color was utilized to announce the purity of a grade of ice cream once used here.

"Knew Him When"

How often do you put a quietus on praise by remarking "I knew him when he was just a common worker," or "I remember when she was a little check girl," or "you know—she lived in the little brown house," thus tending to shut off further conversation in favor of the person.

Do you proceed in the same way whether it be progress made or praise uttered for another.

If so you must have a mean streak in you.

How would you like to work hard, reach a position of prominence and have some jealous person allude to your former low station or weakness.

You wouldn't like it.

You did not intend to please when you reflected unfav[illegible]ly on one who had risen higher [illegible] the scale.

Perhaps your own record carries derogatory public opinion and so you are inclined to bitter, unkind remarks when others are praised, even deservedly.

Serious violations of the law cannot be forgotten of course, but more power to that one who has a desire to make amends and actually works a reformation.

Connie Macks of Girls' Basketball

Unless the unexpected happens as it does at times in world series baseball, a three-time champion will be crowned tonight in the third annual Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky girls' basketball tournament, for the Leavittsburg Athletic club, winner of the 1931 and 1932 titles, seems headed for another victory.

With Susie Sponseller, said to be the greatest feminine passer in the world, at center, the Leavittsburg lassies, who easily downed their opponents in the opening round of the tri-state competition Friday night, are not unlike Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics baseball machine of 1914, which was considered unbeatable until it crashed against the bats of Hank Gowdy and fellow members of the Boston Braves in a championship series.

Although betting odds overwhelmingly favored the Athletics to win the 1914 series, the National leaguers upset the predictions, walked away with the title in four straight games, and prompted the dismantling of the baseball machine which boasted "a $100,000 infield."

Perhaps, it would be well for the Leavittsburg quintet to remember the fate of the American leaguers who made a habit of winning pennants and world championships until the Braves stopped them. And judging from the play in the initial round, the Cleveland Pat Youngs, with Randel and Fischlin, formerly with Leavittsburg, in their lineup, and the Louisville, Ky., Eppings, another strong quintet, may prove to be the Boston Braves of tri-state basketball. The latter clubs appear to be the only quintets to have a chance against the ability of the Sponseller machine which clicks like a championship outfit.

It is a safe wager that it would be well for tri-state tournaments if a dark horse should step into the running for the championship, for the Leavittsburg quintet, with Center Susie in the stellar role, has been making a runaway of the fight during the previous years. And it is the possibility of an upset that will prove a magnet for a capacity crowd at the semi-final, consolation and title clashes tonight.

They will find that their constituents do not want them to offer opposition that impedes progress of what they consider to be essential legislation.

Good for the Babe!

Another baseball season is rounding into shape. After the longest holdout of his career, George Herman Ruth has signed his contract, Colonel Ruppert has expressed himself satisfied and everything is ready to go.

"The Babe's position in the big money of baseball is unique. At a time when exorbitantly high salaries are greeted with raised eyebrows, he can go on bargaining in terms of thousands of dollars with enthusiastic approval. He will make $52,000 this year, after taking a $23,000 cut.

He doesn't earn that much; no single man could. But he is worth it, nevertheless. Perhaps it is because the fans realize just how important his reputation is to the Yankee's financial success that they unhesitatingly give him their moral support in his annual battle with the colonel. It seems almost a good joke on the management which has exploited his fame to such great financial advantage.

It is necessary to go back to 1926 to find a year when the most famous baseball star worked in the field and at the plate for so small a sum. Back in 1926, it was worth $52,500 to the Yankees to have Babe Ruth with them. The next three years it was worth $70,000. In 1930 and 1931, although the depression was getting in its dirty work, $80,000 seemed a fair price. Then deflation started and the big fellow had to get along with $75,000. Now it's down to $52,000 he must go, and who knows but next year it may be back to starting prices as a national celebrity—$30,000?

But Slugger Ruth isn't on charity yet. With good luck, he might stay in the game more or less actively for another decade. He has years of life ahead of him and a scant 40 behind him. His profitable years with the Yankees have brought him the petter part of a million dollars and there's more coming. He is at least one great figure of the big business era who still commands the respect of the paying customers. He gave them their money's worth.

The Feminine Touch

Among coming events which will be watched with special interest is the conference of labor leaders called by Secretary of Labor Perkins for the end of this month. Miss Perkins undoubtedly will be on the spot. The labor leaders she will consult with are hard-fisted, practical men whose knowledge of their subject has been picked up in the field of experience. Many of them openly opposed appointment of a woman to a position which they thought they were better qualified to fill.

They will hold it against her that she is a theorist, who never pulled a lever or threw dirt out of a ditch. They will be skeptical of what she, who made her reputation as a social worker, can offer labor in its unending battle against oppression from above and dissension from within. Their courtesy will be put to it to conceal their internal skepicism. It will be her job to win their confidence and respect by showing them she is qualified to represent the new administration's leadership in the field of labor relationship and welfare.

There may be a necessity for some of the established leaders of labor to yield a point here and there to a woman's viewpoint. It seems not unlikely that Miss Perkins will have a good deal to offer which will be of value and which may be accepted without too great a turmoil among the strictly masculine element with which she will be dealing. After all, she is secretary of labor and will continue to hold the job for four years. It will pay to play ball with her.

The incursion of women into administrative positions in government has been slow. Such honors as have been bestowed upon them by the people have lacked the mandate to make policies and exert vigorous leadership. This precedent, broken when President Roosevelt named Miss Perkins as secretary of labor, will be a handicap to her. She has the ideas and a good program. Further than that, she can claim nothing. The country will await anxiously the response to her bid for cooperation. Who knows what wonders the feminine touch may produce in the practical and sometimes rough work of the department of labor?

Postoffice Pens

Presumably, the promise by Silliman Evans, fourth assistant postmaster-general in the staff of the politically capable Mr. Farley, to provide the people of the United States with better postoffice pens is being kept. Democratic eagerness to serve the people in a way they will appreciate when voting time comes again has found a novel outlet.

But leaving partisan politics out of it, one wonders whether the more perfect postoffice pen advocated by Assistant Evans really represent the high-type of public service. Is there, perhaps, a legitimate question on the wisdom of giving people so much that they can desire no more? Might there be danger in serving the people to a point of satiety?

The postoffice pen's lack of quality has become a tradition. Professional and amateur jokesters have regarded it as legitimate prey for their avaricious wit for decades. The national sense of humor, responding to their sallies, has made of it one of those minor institutions which all men criticize but continue to regard with kindly tolerance.

In a sense, the deficient writing quality of most of the clogged and battered pens displayed by the department has demonstrated to a population which demands much of its government that there are limitations of service. The pens have symbolized the impossibility of a perfect paternalism. They have said to countless irritated users that there are some things which government cannot provide. They have been a stimulus to private ownership of pens that will write.

In all probability, the inconvenience has been worth the end it unintentionally served. But there is no defense for such vulnerable sectors in the efficiency front, unfortunately. Political parties, striving with each other for favor, must ever seek greater favor with the people. One of them, newly come to power, now will inaugurate the era of the perfect pen, which will represent just one more thing the federal government is anxious to do for taxpayers whose never-ending lamentations keep jobholders on the lookout for new outlets of service.

Any Excuse Will Do

The poundmaster of Duluth—truly a noble title—has done a great humanitarian service which may lose him his job. But he wouldn't care much.

With admirable honesty, he has broken down and confessed that he can't put his heart into dog-catching. It's good steady work with good steady pay, but it's degrading his very life.

The truth is that there's no place in it for a fellow with a heart. Take the nasty business of collecting fees, for instance. When the owner has it, all right. When he doesn't, that's all right, too. At least the poundmaster of Duluth feels that way about it.

As for taking away some soft-eyed mutt whose owner can't ransom him on the spot with ready cash for a license, it's out of the question. And, of course, someone has to see to killing the dogs no one wants. It's no work for human beings.

The compassionate jobholder at Duluth has spoken a thought that thuds home with the sturdy sound of fundamental truth. Dog-catching isn't any kind of work for men with soft places in their hearts. Either they must shirk their duty, adopt the dogs or get reputations as men too mean to live. All three are out of the question.

Therefore, why have dog catchers? Why not abolish the office? Why not make that part of the new deal? The world has waited a long time for a dog-catcher to break right down and admit that he couldn't take it. It needed his confession for an excuse to start action.

New York Day By Day

By O. O. McINTYRE.

NEW YORK, March 25—Around 10 a. m., old nestors of the Bowery upstairs lodging houses seep to the sidewalks. Any number are far from the moochers who gravitate from this boulevard to more prosperous streets. They often are H. G. Wells' "gentlemen descended to poverty." Especially the past two years.

To the practised eye, there still are hints of excellent breeding. Whip-cord old bodies are bent, but there is a set to the head which a prideless beggar never acquires. Something of the "to the manor born." Often, glint of aristrocratic fire flashes from rhuemy eyes.

Lodging house "rooms" are mostly piano-box stalls with cots. At night, flickers of light fall from hall gas-jets on blue-veined hands and grey-lined faces. Somewhere about, is a blurred picture—perhaps a faded tintype—with lips that seem to murmur: 'Could I only help!"

They are putterers in a life that has passed them by. Trembly hands fill blackened briars and hold newspapers whose type, save for bold headlines, is too dim to read. Existence settles largely to the state of one's rheumatism. Or the monotony of another sleepless night.

In the Bowery's surprising tumble, one often comes upon a bit of calm. Near Broome street, for instance, I turned into an electrical rapair shop. No one was about and a door in the rear was opened, revealing at a fleeting glance one of the cosiest of living rooms — a jackdaw in a wicker cage, a print of Blue Boy over a brick mantle, a floor of flagging, and an orange cat napping on a rag rug.

Major Raymond Dickson, from the Texas border, was here recently to sit at the bedside of his friend, Thomas Gregory, former attorney general. "When I get a few cockleburrs from behind my ears," he phoned, "I want you to take me to board a little at that place where all the clowns go." I found out he meant the Algonquin, and escorted him. Irvin Cobb awaited him and, looking Dickinson over, archly observed: 'Major, your clothes looked all right to me down at Del Rio."

The Major was telling of an old rancher next to his domain in Mexico who, since the debacle, has been consoling himself in red-eye. "He was trying to make his life and whisky come out even," he explained, "but I'm afraid he is going to outlive his whisky."

A midtown millinery shop is conducted by two fluttery and gardeniaed gentlemen in braided coats, and neatly ruled trousers. They specialize in exotic hats for theatrical ladies. The most expert trimmer is also of male persuasion.

And a Chinese laundry on Lexington avenue bows to the times, with: "Back to old prices—shirts 10 cents, collars 2 cents."

Ed Hill is one of the expert newspaper interviewers who never takes a note. Another grand reporter of a still older school, with a photographic mind, is Ed Howe, who has written entire travel books accurately without jotting down a single incident while journeying. Frank O'Malley, also, was a non-note-taker.

As one of the poor, it has been part of my job to mingle among the sideline spectators of the rich. It occurred to me today that out of a list of 40 such fortunate, I know but two to whom wealth brought happiness. That's confusing.

At a hockey game this winter, I saw, for the first time without his black-face makeup and familiar white linen suit, Jack Powell, one of my major enthusiasms in the entertainment world. He is rarest of artists, a tympanist, who, with a pair of snare drum sticks, rat-atats rhythm that sets audiences atingle. Without orchestral accompaniment, he wanders about beating a tattoo on anything he comes across, from a chair to the tip of a bull fiddle projecting from the pit. It is a fagnificent exploitation of talent over personality.

I asked my wife, after seeing Powell, if she minded if I got a pair or drum sticks to play with around the house, "Not if we are going to keep on going together," she replied.

How To Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND.

NOT long after reaching the age of 30 the average person will put on weight. But to carry too much at this period is a definite stumbling block to good health. Too often the importance of weight is not considered at this time of life and the average person overlooks the necessity of controlling it.

Most persons can blame their overweight on three things: Carelessness in diet, lack of exercise, and improper mode of living. In some instances it can be traced to some glandular disturbance. Overweight which is caused by trouble in the glands appears at an early age and persists regardless of care in diet and exercise.

Many women fear being fat because it is not fashionable. I am sorry to say few fear it because it is a menace to health.

Persons who are overweight are liable to many constitutional diseases, specially diabetes, high blood pressure and gall bladder disease. Heart disease is commonly found in individuals who are overweight. The heart muscle is replaced by fat and that organ becomes flabby and weak, unfit to continue with its work.

Severe Dieting Unwise

There is danger in every fad having to do with the body. Within recent years severe diets for reducing have become popular. They are dangerous and in many instances have resulted in serious ailments. Never starve or go on a special diet unless you have been advised to do so by your physician. It is wise to have a thorough physical examination to determine why you are overweight and whether the condition is caused by some disease.

No matter what the diet may be, it is imperative that certain foods be included in the daily intake. If these so-called "protective foods" are omitted, disability and even disease may result. Milk, leafy vegetables and fresh fruits are among those which are essential. They supply necessary vitamines and minerals needed for health.

Anemia, scurvy, beri-beri and pellegra are a few of the serious disorders that may follow severe dieting in an effort to rdeuce. Too often stout persons exclude the important foods I have mentioned and of course lose weight, but find themselves suffering from some serious disease.

Bear in mind that sudden and rapid loss of weight is dangerous. Restrict the amount of food you eat, tempting any form of exercise contains the necessary proteins, carbohydrates and fats.

Avoid Too Rich Food

Avoid pies, pastries and rich desserts. Get outdoors and walk in the air as much as possible. Lack of a regular amount of exercise leads to overweight. There are many forms of exercise which will help to reduce weight.

Exercise should never be indulged in too strenuously. It is harmful when taken in excess and is dangerous for the obese person who is not accustomed to it. Before attempting any form of exercise consult with your physician.

Overweight is a hindrance to good health and longevity. Neglected overweight becomes more and more difficult to cure. Watch your weight and take the necessary steps to prevent obesity.

DAYBOOK

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON — With so many jobs to hand out and with such a great number of people hungrily eyeing the patronage lists, it has become a matter for speculation as to what technique the Democratic leaders will employ in the method of distribution.

The average person, unless he is looking for a job, might find it difficult to understand just why senators and representatives in such times work themselves up into such a fret over the proposition.

Simply, the answer is that these gentlemen can't help it. They are exposed to the demands of those wanting jobs as never before. They are hounded in their offices. Their daily mail bulges with requests for jobs. And try as they may, they can't escape the fact that the responsibility for filling them is theirs—at least in the eyes of the applicants.

Farley's New Theory

In the light of this, therefore, it is not difficult to understand why, under the surface, "Big Jim" Farley has caused the gentlemen "on the hill" to gnash their teeth of late. Farley, the patronage boss, started out with a new theory in the matter of giving federal jobs.

"Big Jim's" idea, in effect, was that deserving Democrats who wanted a share in the spoils of victory would be certified by the party leaders of the state after consultation with the county leaders.

This meant that the senators and representatives would be deprived of their time-honored prerogative of being consulted before jobs were filled in their states and districts. The singular thing about Farley's idea was that the senate confirms major appointments made by the President.

The distribution had hardly begun, however, before things were changed. A conference at the White House resulted in the word going out that senators would be consulted in appointments affecting their states.

An Instance

Rumor has it that an incident occurred recently "on the hill" which, if true, provides a good illustration of what might continue to happen had the Farley rule been adhered to.

President Roosevelt sent to the senate the name of a Californian for appointment to the shipping board. Senator McAdoo, it is said, had no knowledge of the selection, and was not entirely pleased.

At the moment it appears that senators will have a say in the patronage distribution. But what about the representatives? Some of those gentlemen have very definite ideas on the subject.

Maybe the technique will have to undergo further revision.

WASHINGTON — During the years that Senator "Doc" Copeland of New York has been on Capitol Hill, he has voluntarily taken upon himself the task of safeguarding the health of members of congress.

In the days before the senate installed apparatus for purifying the air in the chamber where sessions are held, the good doctor was constantly warring against atmospheric conditions under which senators were compelled to work.

He deplored the lack of sunlight in the chamber. (The senate chamber is so situated that admittance of sunlight is impossible.) He urged that something be done about it, and voiced dire warnings to the senators that their health was being impaired by the absence of ultra-violet rays.

Nor did he confine his activities to the senate.

Air! More Air!

The story is told that one day he visited President Coolidge. Noticing that all the windows were closed, he strode across the room and opened them himself.

"There's not enough fresh air in here, Mr. President," he is said to have remarked. Now that's better."

Now that the Democratic are in control of the senate, Senator Copeland has a job that suits his temperament perfectly. The chairmanship of the rules committee fell to him.

The chairman of the rules committee has under his immediate supervision the senate wing of the capitol and the senate office building. The job of keeping the quarters of senators and the places they frequent during the day in the capitol clean, well ventilated and well-appointed is up to him.

His Duties Varied

He has supervision over the galleries. The muchly-publicized-of-late senator barber shop and bathrooms fall under his jurisdiction. He has charge of the senate restaurant. The delicate and difficult task of assigning office space to senators is also his.

The doctor's job is one which carries with it some times a lot of grief. Some senators are temperamental, highly so.

"Doc" Copeland knows this and already is on guard. The other week-end it became necessary to adjust the electric power facilities in the senate office building. He took the floor of the senate to warn:

"There'll be no elevator service on Sunday, senators. I just wanted to tell you so that there'll be no misunderstanding on the part of those of you who are in the habit of working on Sundays."

The Reviewing Stand

By TOM T. JONES.

PERHAPS the last Indian that was noted within the confines of East Liverpool was the Red brave who made a solitary visit on foot to the hilltop of the Northside just north of the home of Dr. W. H. Hobbs and across the roadway near the spot where later was erected the city reservoir from which a part of the city's drinking supply is obtained.

This Indian was seen by the late William Davidson, father of the late Mitchell Davidson and grandfather of the late Attorney George and Sheriff William Davidson. Knowledge of the visitation of this lone Indian remains in the mind of Harry Peach of West Fifth street.

Mr. Peach was among those who attended the recent meeting of the East Liverpool Historical society in the Carnegie library building. Although he did not relate the incident of this visit of the apparently last Indian to East Liverpool at the session of this organization he did so to others upon his walk homeward from this reorganization gathering.

The numerous references to past days in and about East Liverpool moved Mr. Peach to recall a time in his youthful days when he was in attendance at a meeting in the old school house on East Fourth street which preceded the present Central building upon the same plot. Then it was that he recalled hearing the late William Davidson relate of the meeting which he had had as a lad with this solitary Indian whom he met upon the hilltops, then a far outside section of the rambling village upon the Ohio river below this summit north of the place in which the majority of folks in the locality then lived.

As Mr. Peach recalled the incident related by this pioneer resident it was to the effect that he, then a lad, had a message to deliver or a chore to perform which took him to a point beyond where the Northside now is located. He made the trip on foot. He was proceding leisurely upon his way when suddenly looking up he perceived, sitting on a log, just off the roadway or path upon which he was walking on Indian with his rifle lying across his knees. He was dressed in typical Indian fashion and from his hair protruded long feathers. He loomed an Indian who had wandered momentarily from his band and was gazing about to note what he could see so close to the settlement of white residents.

FOR the moment Mr. Davidson developed a fear that all but prompted him to turn and run back to the nearest home. But he decided that he had a duty to perform and that he was not bent on molesting the Indian, Mr. Peach recalled the narrator as relating. So he determined to go on and pass the Red Man without paying any attention apparently to him.

This he did but naturally he kept a close watch out of the corner of his eye upon the Red man with the gun. The latter, although noting the passing of the boy, set imperturbably in his place. He moved not a muscle. The passing lad did not speak. And the Indian uttered not a sound. In this silence the boy managed to pass the Indian. He moved as rapidly as possible without appearing to run and soon consummated the errand that brought him to this section of the locality near which he lived.

Then he retraced his steps, Mr. Peach recalls Mr. Davidson as saying. He wondered if the feathered Red Man would be in the same spot when he returned. Upon getting into view of the site of his former resting place he discovered that the Indian had silently retreated in the direction whence he had come. None ever came to know who the tawney visitor was, what his purpose had been and to what point he returned.

In days that followed as he grew to manhood Mr. Davidson came to the conclusion that this was doubtless the last armed Red Man to visit the site of what later became East Liverpool. He listened to stories by other residents but none seemed to have seen Indians hereabouts in days later than when he, upon this lone occasion, came upon the Indian sitting upon a log while holding carelessly to the gun which he always carried with him.

The story as related by Mr. Davidson upon this school occasion had marked effect upon the young persons hearing it. It seemed to impress more vividly than would be the case in these days that this locality was once the roaming ground of many bodies of Indians as they crossed the Ohio river at the foot of Babb's island and made their way after visiting Rock Springs into sections of western and middle Pennsylvania.

THERE was brought out the fact in this meeting of the East Liverpool Historical society that once upon a time a white dog had served to advertise in a peculiar and quite permanent manner the ice cream which at the moment was being dispensed in a confectionery store which Mr. Peach and his father, the late George Peach, were then maintaining in the Diamond.

Reference to this dog and the incident in which he figured brought a merry smile to the features of Mr. Peach. He later admitted the truthfulness of the story regarding it. There had come to the Peach establishment a rather small dog. None knew where it had been making its former home. It was an unusual appearing dog in that it was all white in color. In this respect it stood out. It was called "Jack."

About that time there was a bit of emphasis being made upon the ice cream that was being served in this establishment, which gave some young men of the day an idea. This idea took the form of their taking the white-colored dog and painting the words upon its sides in letters of black, "Use Peach's Ice Cream."

These words in black upon a base of white made them stand out. They could be read for a great distance. "Jack" was a friendly dog who indulged in visiting hours upon every day of the week. Indeed, he made the rounds of the town frequently with and without other canines. Always he came back to the establishment to which he had come from apparently nowhere.

All of the time he was, without making any apparent effort to do so, advertising the good qualities of this particular ice cream. "Jack" in this manner became widely known. Everybody seemed to know him. There was a long interim of time that transpired before the elements and the wear and tear of being out in the open caused the black letters upon his sides to become undecipherable.

In the meantime there had been no damage to the trade in ice cream. "Jack" made his rounds about the town and also while hearing men and women comment as to the identity of those who had thought of such a singular departure that mingled humor with practicability.

Thus "Jack" in part at least served his day and generation well. And now after all of these years men, who were themselves at the time but youths, recalled the incident of how a dog of entirely white color was utilized to announce the purity of a grade of ice cream once used here.

ONCE OVER

By J. J. MUNDY

"Knew Him When"

How often do you put a quietus on praise by remarking "I knew him when he was just a common worker," or "I remember when she was a little check girl," or "you know—she lived in the little brown house," thus tending to shut off further conversation in favor of the person.

Do you proceed in the same way whether it be progress made or praise uttered for another.

If so you must have a mean streak in you.

How would you like to work hard, reach a position of prominence and have some jealous person allude to your former low station or weakness.

You wouldn't like it.

You did not intend to please when you reflected unfavorably on one who had risen higher in the scale.

Perhaps your own record carries derogatory public opinion and so you are inclined to bitter, unkind remarks when others are praised, even deservedly.

Serious violations of the law cannot be forgotten of course, but more power to that one who has a desire to make amends and actually works a reformation.

FAVORITES GAIN SECOND ROUND IN TOURNEY

LEAVITTSBURG FIVE OPENS DEFENSE OF TITLE WITH VICTORY

Sponseller Scores 27 Points; East Liverpool; Dayton, Cleveland, Zanesville and Louisville Clubs Also Triumph.

By ROBERT ELLIOTT,
Sports Editor, The Review.

A HALF-DOZEN favored quintets, paced by the Leavittsburg A. C., defending champions, reached the second round in the third annual Tri-State girls' basketball tournament Friday night by scoring victories on the high school court here. Struthers Boosters and Cuyahoga Falls R. C. A. Rubber, who drew byes, were scheduled to make their first appearance in the tournament at 10 a. m. today against the Louisville, Ky., Eppings and Cleveland Pat Youngs, respectively.

"Susie" Sponseller again was the spark plug of the Leavittsburg attack, scoring 13 field goals and a free throw for a total of 27 points as the champs conquered Jacobs Confectioners of Wheeling, 38 to 14. Susie didn't extend herself any, but still piled up her amazing total of counters. The L. A. C. quint, although not looking as strong as in past years, still possessed enough power to be declared tourney favorites in most quarters.

The Wheeling quint was fairly strong, but simply couldn't get enough shots. Hamlin and Pracht led the losers with four points apiece. Leavittsburg led 10-0 at the first quarter and 23-7 at half-time.

Expected to furnish Leavittsburg with the stiffest opposition was the Pat Young Service machine of Cleveland, which buried the Salem Community quint under a 47 to 6 score Friday night. The Pats used 10 players, all of whom broke into the scoring column. Lommler led the attack with 11 counters, while Graham checked in with eight markers.

Kentucky Quint Romps.

The Pat Youngs led 14-0, 31-4 and 43-4 at the quarters. S. Hanna, A. Hanna and Mileusivic all scored two points to account for the Salem markers.

The Cleveland club was to meet the Cuyahoga Falls quint this morning and was favored. Leavittsburg was not scheduled until this afternoon, being listed to meet the Zanesville Zane Co-Eds.

Louisville, Ky., Eppings Girls, champs of Kentucky and Indiana for two seasons, overwhelmed the Wellsville Merchants in last night's opener, 44 to 5. Bruckner, a mighty fine center, led the Louisville scoring with 10 field goals. She played a dandy floor game, in addition. Yadon, a guard, aided the Louisville cause with five fielders and two free throws.

The Eppings lassies led 16-0 at the first quarter, was 25-2 at half-time. The Louisville team was scheduled to play this morning, meeting the Struthers Boosters, with a hard-fought contest in sight.

Purols Look Good.

The Dayton Purol Peps, just about the neatest looking aggregation to appear during the opening session, ran into unexpected trouble from the Harmony A. C. quint of Mingo, although they recorded a 29 to 20 victory. Dayton led, 15-8, at half-time, but the Mingo club put on a rally in the first part of the fourth quarter that brought the score to 21-19 at one stage.

Bausman led the Purols with six fielders, while Bolender dumped in four double pointers. Dean paced the Mingo attack with three buckets and four fouls.

Ara Feldkamp played the leading role as the East Liverpool Merchants, composed of former Pottery City high school stars, eliminated the Rogers I. G. A. club, 23 to 11. The first half was close, the locals leading only 9-8 at the intermission. However, East Liverpool pulled steadily away in the last two periods to win with something to spare.

Dayton and East Liverpool were to collide this afternoon in another second round fracas.

The Zanesville Zane Co-Eds put just about the best forward in the tournament on exhibition as they downed the Salem Pennzips in a closely-contested fray, 29 to 22. Benich was the young lady in question. She scored 10 field goals for all but nine of the Zanesville points. Paxson starred for Salem with 11 counters.

Two Consolation Tilts.

Zanesville led 9-6 at the first quarter and 17-10 at half-time. The teams each scored 12 counters in the last half.

The consolation series between the six teams eliminated in the first round also got under way Friday night with the Salem Pennzips downing the Wheeling Jacobs Confectioners, 30-24, and the Rogers I. G. A. quint beating the Harmony A. C.'s, 29-18.

The remainder of the consolation series will be played this afternoon. The Pennzip meet the Wellville Merchants at 1:30 with the Rogers club opposing the Salem Community cagers at 1:50. The winners meet at 4:10 in the consolation series final.

Phillies Pennant Threat

Slugging Ability To Be Big Factod; Finn at Second Base.

By ALAN GOULD,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

For the simple reason that they rely on Neal (Mickey) Finn to plug the long-standing gap at second base, plus the fact that they carry the heaviest hitting artillery in the league, the Philadelphia Nationals actually hear the far-away buzzing of the pennant bee this spring. They haven't been on top since 1915.

The Phillies had to part with one of their most reliable right-handed pitchers, Ray Benge, to get Finn from Brooklyn but Manager Burt Shotton considers it was the smartest and most effective deal he has swung since he took charge of the club in -928. Finn is the best second sacker the club has had since Fresco Thompson.

Poison to Pirates

The 1932 Phillies finished a dozen games behind the Cubs but they demonstrated their ability against the stronger teams by winning a big majority of their games from Pittsburgh and Brooklyn. George Gibson, Pirate chief, called them "the toughest club in the league."

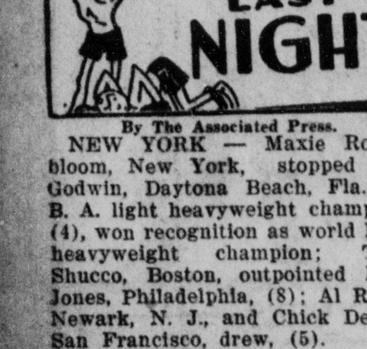
Shotton still has a problem in his holdout first baseman, Don Hurst, but he has developed a hard-hitting understudy for this emergency in Gus Dugas, obtained from Pittsburgh. With Dick Bartell at short and Captain "Pinky" Whitney at third, the Phillie pilot insists he would not trade his infield for any other in the league.

The Phils may miss the fleet George Davis, but Shotton Seems confident Chick Fullis will do as a replacement, flakned in left by Hal Lee and in right field by Chuck Klein, All-American clouter. Klein, a .350 slugger, is the powerhouse of the team.

Pitching Staff Stronger

The pitching staff looks stronger despite the loss of Benge. Jumbo Jim Elliott, giant southpaw, appears to have recovered from the lame back that handicapped him last year, and hopes to repeat his 1931 record of 19 victories. Flint Rhem, one of the best right handers in the league when on his good behavior, is attending strictly to business. Fidgety Phil Collins, veteran right-hander, and two youngsters who made good last year, Ed Holley and Roy Hansen, a southpaw, complete the probable starting staff. One of the best rookie prospects is Frank Pearce, who won 20 games for Nashville last season. Austin (Cy) Moore, obtained from Brooklyn, should be useful.

Virgil Davis, heavyweight backstop and .335 hitter, will do the bulk of the catching, with a first-rate understudy in Al Todd.



By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK — Maxie Rosenbloom, New York, stopped Bob Godwin, Daytona Beach, Fla., N. B. A. light heavyweight champion, (4), won recognition as world light heavyweight champion; Tony Shucco, Boston, outpointed Billy Jones, Philadelphia, (8); Al Rossi, Newark, N. J., and Chick Devlin, San Francisco, drew, (5).

EAU CLAIRE, Wis.—Otto von Porat, Norway, knocked out Biff Bennett, Fort Sheridan, Ill., (4).

ANDERSON, IND. — Pee Wee Jarrell, Fort Wayne, Ind., outpointed Jack O'Brien, Chicago, (10).

BENEFIT GAME AT CHESTER

The Chester high school varsity basketball quint, coached by Earl Ewing, will meet a team of former stars in a benefit clash Monday night at 7:30 on the city hall floor. The proceeds will be used to purchase gold basketballs for the five senior members of the 1933 high school varsity.

BOYER HEADS ASHLAND.

Bush At Work On Hurlers

Donie Satisfied With Hitting of Redleg Regulars.

By The Associated Press.

TAMPA, Fla.—Gratified with the hitting of his Redlegs in the five games they have played with major league clubs, Donie Bush, Cincinnati manager, today devoted his attention to the mound staff.

Bush cancelled an intra-club game scheduled for this afternoon believing a workout would do the players, especially Hafey, Morissey, Lucas and Rixey, just off the hospital list, more good.

BRADENTON, Fla. — The annual back-to-the-minor league parade was started at the St. Louis Cardinal training camp.

Two pitchers, Albert Fisher and Ted Nobriga, were released yesterday to the Houston club in the Texas league.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Russell White, youthful southpaw who had experience in three camps last year, will have his chance today to show whether he has in that left arm enough magic to rate a 1933 berth with the St. Louis Browns.

Manager Bill Killefer said White and another newcomer, Jack Knott, will pitch for the Browns in this afternoon's exhibition game against the Buffalo team of the International league.

BILOXI, Miss. — Cleveland's Indians may go into the 1933 American league with a southpaw pitcher to bolster the twirling staff of five capable right handers.

Forrest Twogood, the former University of Iowa twirling ace, again demonstrated potential big league style by holding Washington to four scattered hits in six innings yesterday. He issued nine bases on balls, however.

HOUSTON, Texas—The Detroit Tigers were to meet the Houston Buffs of the Texas league here today in the initial exhibition game of their swing through the south and east. They broke camp at San Antonio yesterday.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—The hitless Boston Braves, who have dropped six straight games to the New York Yankees, will get another crack at the world's champions here today.

SARASOTA, Fla.—Heartened by their success against the Newark Bears, Manager Marty McManus and his Boston Red Sox will move on to Clearwater today with high hopes of evening their exhibition struggle with the Philadelphia Nationals.

MIAMI, Fla., March 25.—The two best rookie pitching prospects in the Brooklyn Dodger camp, says Manager Max Carey, are Walter Beck and Thornton Schwenk.

Beck is the right hander from Memphis who has pitched so well in exhibition games so far. Schwenk is a left-hander from Dayton with lots of stuff on teh ball.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Babe Ruth is one ball player whose drawing power at the "gate" can be calculated rather accurately.

A crowd of 1,581, the biggest by far this season at the local park, turned out yesterday to see the Yankees slugger pound out a home run in the first exhibition game of the year. On Thursday, when Ruth had not settled his salary differences, and did not play, only 500 fans came out for the Yankees' exhibition.

PHOENIX, Ariz.—Third baseman Johnny Vergez, never considered one of the New York Giants' outstanding hitters, was leading the club at bat as the Giants came here for the first game of their homeward - bound barnstorming tour. Vergez hit something over .400 in exhibition games on the Pacific Coast.

CRACK GOLFERS IN OPEN EVENT

By The Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 25.—A host of America's greatest golfers set off this morning down the 36-hole road which will lead some of them to share of the $2,500 Charleston open prize.

In their van was Walter Hagen, who came to the final day of the tournament with a total of 139, one stroke ahead of Joe Kirkwood, New York trick shot artist. Archie Hambrick of Zanesville, O., Henry Picard of Charleston and Bobby Cruickshank of Richmon were tied for third place with 143.

Far down the list was Horton Smith of Oak Park, Ill., whose 159 placed him almost at the bottom of the professional list.

FACES STIFF SCHEDULE.

By The Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, March 25.—Cincinnati's Bearcat baseball team will play every Buckeye conference team except Wittenberg and may play a third game with Miami, under a continuation of an extensive spring sports program, Dana M. King, athletic director and baseball coach, announced.

"BLONDY" RYAN COLORFUL NEW YORK ROOKIE

Helped Elect Boss Sheriff; Father Is Policeman.

He Used to Throw 60-Yard Passes at Holy Cross.

(This is the second of a series of personality sketches on outstanding men in the major league training camps.)

By The Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES — From deep shortstop to first base is a long peg for the average ball player, but it's no distance at all to John (Blondy) Ryan, great rookie shortstop of the New York Giants.

Why, John used to flip footballs almost twice that far when he was a star quarterback at Holy Cross. Once he heaved one 62 yards to beat Harvard.

Blondy starred for the Crusaders in baseball and football for four years, '26, '27, '28 and '29, getting in before the freshman rule was adopted. In that time the Crusaders licked Harvard twice and tied them once on the gridiron.

The '29 Holy Cross baseball team, on which Ryan shortstopped, still is considered about the greatest college crew ever developed. Thirteen of its members graduated into professional ball. It won 25 games and lost only two.

Had Famous Tutors.

The young man who is trying to beat the veteran Travis Jackson out of his job should be a good shortstop. He's been building toward a big league career ever since he can remember, and he's had the finest tutoring obtainable.

His coach at Holy Cross was Jack Barry, shortstop on the Athletics' famous "$100,000 infield." During his college vacations he used to work out at Braves Field in Boston, where Johnny Evers and Rabbit Maranville showed him the tricks.

Upon graduation he hurried to Chicago for a tryout with the White Sox, and received some more pointers from Donie Bush. Now he is getting valuable tips from Jackson, his shortstopping rival.

Ryan finished the 1930 season with the White Sox, appearing in some 30 games. His debut was sensational. In his first game he hit a home run off Herb Pennock of the Yankees.

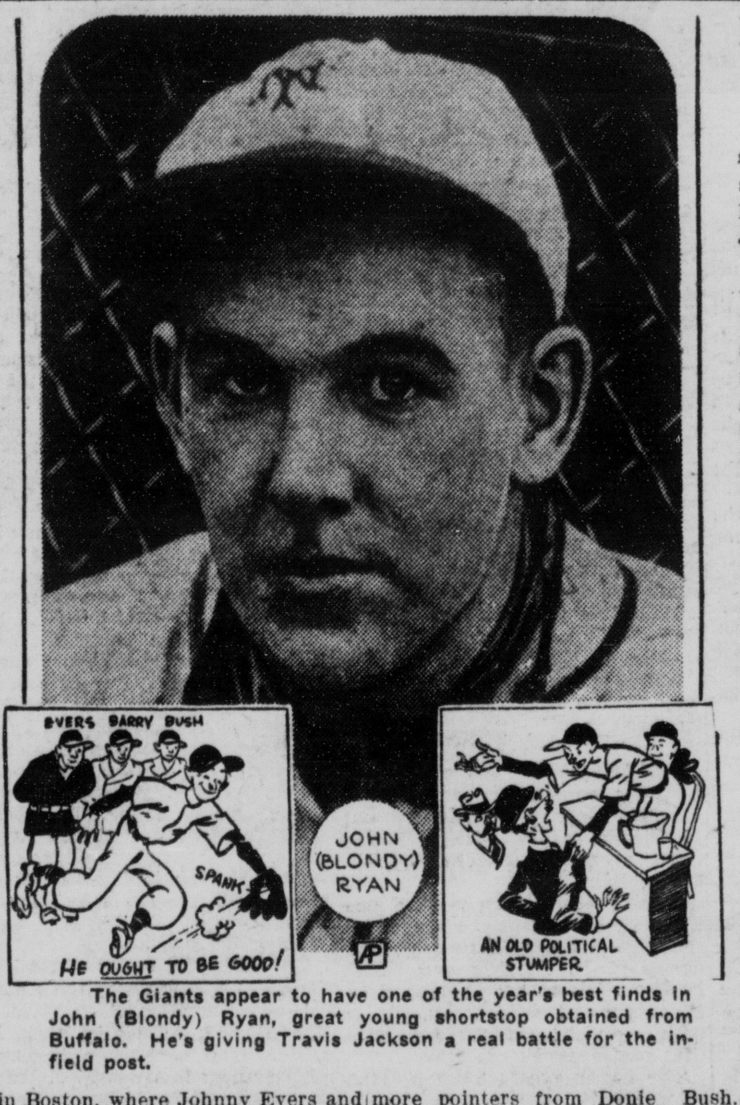
From the Sox, Blondy moved through Indianapolis and Atlanta before "finding" himself last season with Buffalo. He hit only .267 for the Bisons, but his fielding was sensational. Also, he smacked 11 home runs, three of them with the bases loaded. He's looked like an improved hitter in the Giants' spring games.

Ryan has fine physical equipment, 175 pounds well distributed over a six-foot frame. His father is a policeman at Lynn, Mass., and that's considered a good sign by his new owners. One of the greatest players the Giants ever had, Long George Kelly, also was a policeman's son.

Knows His Politics.

While every team has its clubhouse "politicians," Ryan really has been on the hustings. At the close of last season he went out and made stump speeches for Frank Offerman, owner of the Buffalo club, who was running for sheriff of Erie county. He must have done fairly well, as Offerman was elected.

Ryan knows how to make friends. He's already popular with his new teammates. He attended the last minor league meeting at Columbus "just to see how things were run." When he had nothing else to do last winter, he assisted in coaching a high school football team at Lynn.



The Giants appear to have one of the year's best finds in John (Blondy) Ryan, great young shortstop obtained from Buffalo. He's giving Travis Jackson a real battle for the infield post.

Ralph Metcalfe Heads Brilliant Array of Luminaries.

By The Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 25. — Ralph Metcalfe, world's 60 - yard dash record holder from Marquette university, faces the starter's gun for the fourth time this week here today in the first annual Butler universitty relays.

The appearance of the Negro Olympic sprinter shares attention with a program of seven relay events and five individual events, in which thirty midwest colleges and universities have entered more than 350 of their best performers.

Metcalfe set the world indoor mark at his specialty at 6.1 seconds in the Central intercollegiate conference meet at South Bend, Ind., two weeks ago, and equalled it at Hamilton, Ontario, last Wednesday.

Another Negro star, Willis Ward, University of Michigan high jumper, will compete in that event. Indiana university, which nosed out Michigan for the Western conference indoor title, will present relay teams built about its 1932 Olympic runners, Ivan Fuqua and Charles Mornbostel, but faces strong competition from Wisconsin, Michigan and Illinois.

Other competing schools include Chicago, Purdue, Notre Dame, Michigan State, Pittsburgh, Butler, Illinois Wesleyan, Michigan Normal, Miami, Pittsburg, Kansas., Teachers, Western State of Kalamazoo, Mich.; Emporia, Kas., Teachers, Crane and Armour Tech. of Chicago.

Preliminaries in the 60-yard dash and 60-yard hurdles were scheduled for 3 p. m. with finals in all events at night. The pole vault, with high jump and shot put are the field events included, while university teams will engage in mile, two-mile, medley and four-mile relays, and college teams in the mile-two-mile and medley races.

PIN CHAMPIONS SELDOM REPEAT

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., March 25. — "Uneasy rests the head that wears the crown" applies to the bowling game. Never in 32 years of American Bowling Congress tournament competition has an individual champion ever succeeded himself.

Otto Nitschke, veteran of more than 20 A. B. C. tournaments, will attempt to retain his individual title today. The Clevelander topped 7,177 bowlers in the tourney at Detroit last year, in scoring 731.

Four Local Amateurs Triumph On Midland Fight Card Friday

Keith Goodballet Wins on Knockout, While Jackie Trotter, Chet Prosser and Ralph Yanni Cop Decisions.

It was a big night for a quartet of East Liverpool amateur boxers Friday evening when Midland post No. 481, American Legion, staged its benefit show in the gymnasium of Lincoln high school in the up-river city. Approximately 1,200 fans witnessed the eight scraps which were staged.

Keith Goodballet, local middleweight, continued his sensational pace by kayoing Pete Boy of New Brighton in the second round. Boy is rated as one of the toughest boys in the Beaver valley, but he faded out of the picture as Goodballet came through with one of his customary wallops.

Jackie Trotter looked mighty good in scoring a decision over Young Reed of Toronto in the 120-pound class. Trotter had Reed down twice in the third heat and won with something to spare. Ralph Yanni of East End punched out a verdict over Nat Barnes, highly-touted New Brighton lad at 120 pounds. Chet Prosser was the other local lad to triumph, scoring a decision over Steve Brinzo of Beaver Falls at 145 pounds. This was one of the best scraps of the evening.

Sammy Yosho of Toronto, who fights out of Don Trotter's stable, accounted for the other knockout by flooring Tuffy Cananzi of New Galilee on a technical K. O. in the second heat. Earl Gualtier of Wellsville lost a decision to Butch Vinovich of Midland at 130 pounds.

Kid Robinson of Chester, 122, was the loser in his scrap with Dan Yonick of Aliquippa. John Madzan of Aliquippa was the only upper valley lad to triumph, scoring a decision over Al Verzelle of Midland in the 126-pound division.

BILL'S GATHER EASY TRIUMPH

EAST PALESTINE, March 25.—Bill's plastered a 47-8 beating on New Waterford in a local league clash Friday night. Smith led the scorers with 16 counters. Darlington shaded the Buckeye Bakers, 21-19, in a close battle. J. Loyd and Van Fossan each had seven counters.

Yarosz Punches Out Decisive Win Over Paulie Walker

Ted Cops 8 of 10 Rounds

Monacan Finishes Strong to Gain Easy Victory.

A WHIRLWIND finish that left Paulie Walker of Trenton, N. J., a badly beaten and thoroughly demoralized scrapper, also gave Teddy Yarosz of Monaca a unanimous decision in their 10-round main event at the Arena in Pittsburgh Friday night. Teddy, weighing 151¾, had three and one-quarter pounds advantage.

Walker gave Yarosz somewhat of an argument for the first six rounds, but Ted copped the last four heats with one of the best performances he has ever shown a Pittsburgh audience. Using his left and right most effectively, he punched and jabbed Walker at will toward the end of the scrap.

Flashes in Seventh

Ringside experts gave Teddy all but two rounds, presenting Walker the edge in the fourth and sixth stanzas. It was in these rounds that Walker shook Ted with a right cross, but the Monacan came back strong to pummel Paulie severely.

Both scrappers concentrated their attacks to the face, with Ted's flashing left beating a steady tattoo on Walker's beak all the way. Ted had no difficulty in staying out of the road of the greater share of Walker's punches. He shook off what blows Paulie did land without any undue difficulty.

Teddy entered the ring with a patch over his right eye, a remainder of his last bitter scrap with Eddie "Kid" Wolfe, and when the 10th round had ended the covering was still intact, mute evidence of Yarosz's defensive skill.

It was a beautiful scrap all the way with each frame producing lots of action for the customers. In the seventh round, however, Teddy cut loose with his full attack, hitting Paulie with both hands without even the semblance of a return. Walker was mighty wobbly when the round ended.

Panoz in Front.

Harry Weekley, the classy little Alliance 130-pounder, won a split decision over Johnny Durso of Oakland in a fast six-round affair. Gene Panoz, also of Alliance, copped the opener from Joey Zelano of Pittsburgh. They are 112 pound battlers.

The semi-final offering saw Johnny Datto, 124, kayo Johnny Chioda, 127, in the first round. Anson Green, Homestead Negro, 157, dropped a six-round verdict to Jackie Wilson, Northside, 158, on a decision that was roundly booed by the fans.

SYSTEM STILLS ROOSTER'S CROW

By The United Press.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — An expert at making roosters keep quiet, during those early morning hours, is the qualification of Officer E. W. Teater.

Officer Teater has been called upon several times to still the voices of the barnyard farm clocks and thereby enforce the anti-noise ordinance.

The system Officer Teater uses is to have the loud mouthed rooster placed on a perch near the top of the chicken house so he cannot straighten up. A rooster needs plenty of room in which to do his crowing, Officer Teater said.

FAVORITES GAIN SECOND ROUND IN TOURNEY

LEAVITTSBURG FIVE OPENS DEFENSE OF TITLE WITH VICTORY

Sponseller Scores 27 Points; East Liverpool; Dayton, Cleveland, Zanesville and Louisville Clubs Also Triumph.

By ROBERT ELLIOTT,
Sports Editor, The Review.

A HALF-DOZEN favored quintets, paced by the Leavittsburg A. C., defending champions, reached the second round in the third annual Tri-State girls' basketball tournament Friday night by scoring victories on the high school court here. Struthers Boosters and Cuyahoga Falls R. C. A. Rubber, who drew byes, were scheduled to make their first appearance in the tournament at 10 a. m. today against the Louisville, Ky., Eppings and Cleveland Pat Youngs, respectively.

"Susie" Sponseller again was the spark plug of the Leavittsburg attack, scoring 13 field goals and a free throw for a total of 27 points as the champs conquered Jacobs Confectioners of Wheeling, 38 to 14. Susie didn't extend herself any, but still piled up her amazing total of counters. The L. A. C. quint, although not looking as strong as in past years, still possessed enough power to be declared tourney favorites in most quarters.

The Wheeling quint was fairly strong, but simply couldn't get enough shots. Hamlin and Pracht led the losers with four points apiece. Leavittsburg led 10-0 at the first quarter and 23-7 at halftime.

Expected to furnish Leavittsburg with the stiffest opposition was the Pat Young Service machine of Cleveland, which buried the Salem Community quint under a 47 to 6 score Friday night. The Pats used 10 players, all of whom broke into the scoring column. Lommler led the attack with 11 counters, while Graham checked in with eight markers.

Kentucky Quint Romps.

The Pat Youngs led 14-0, 31-4 and 43-4 at the quarters. S. Hanna, A. Hanna and Mileusivic all scored two points to account for the Salem markers.

The Cleveland club was to meet the Cuyahoga Falls quint this morning and was favored. Leavittsburg was not scheduled until this afternoon, being listed to meet the Zanesville Zane Co-Eds.

Louisville, Ky., Eppings Girls, champs of Kentucky and Indiana for two seasons, overwhelmed the Wellsville Merchants in last night's opener, 44 to 5. Bruckner, a mighty fine center, led the Louisville scoring with 10 field goals. She played a dandy floor game, in addition. Yadon, a guard, aided the Louisville cause with five fielders and two free throws.

The Eppings lassies led 16-0 at the first quarter, was 25-2 at halftime. The Louisville team was scheduled to play this morning, meeting the Struthers Boosters, with a hard-fought contest in sight.

Purols Look Good.

The Dayton Purol Peps, just about the neatest looking aggregation to appear during the opening session, ran into unexpected trouble from the Harmony A. C. quint of Mingo, although they recorded a 29 to 20 victory. Dayton led, 15-8, at half-time, but the Mingo club put on a rally in the first part of the fourth quarter that brought the score to 21-19 at one stage.

Bausman led the Purols with six fielders, while Bolender dumped in four double pointers. Dean paced the Mingo attack with three buckets and four fouls.

Ara Feldkamp played the leading role as the East Liverpool Merchants, composed of former Pottery City high school stars, eliminated the Rogers I. G. A. club, 23 to 11. The first half was close, the locals leading only 9-8 at the intermission. However, East Liverpool pulled steadily away in the last two periods to win with something to spare.

Dayton and East Liverpool were to collide this afternoon in another second round fracas.

The Zanesville Zane Co-Eds put just about the best forward in the tournament on exhibition as they downed the Salem Pennzips in a closely-contested fray, 29 to 22. Benich was the young lady in question. She scored 10 field goals for all but nine of the Zanesville points. Paxson starred for Salem with 11 counters.

Two Consolation Tilts.

Zanesville led 9-6 at the first quarter and 17-10 at half-time. The teams each scored 12 counters in the last half.

The consolation series between the six teams eliminated in the first round also got under way Friday night with the Salem Pennzips downing the Wheeling Jacobs Confectioners, 30-24, and the Rogers I. G. A. quint beating the Harmony A. C.'s, 29-18.

The remainder of the consolation series will be played this afternoon. The Pennzip meet the Wellville Merchants at 1:30 with the Rogers club opposing the Salem Community cagers at 1:50. The winners meet at 4:10 in the consolation series final.

Phillies Pennant Threat

Slugging Ability To Be Big Factod; Finn at Second Base.

By ALAN GOULD,
Associated Press Sports Editor.

For the simple reason that they rely on Neal (Mickey) Finn to plug the long-standing gap at second base, plus the fact that they carry the heaviest hitting artillery in the league, the Philadelphia Nationals actually hear the far-away buzzing of the pennant bee this spring. They haven't been on top since 1915.

The Phillies had to part with one of their most reliable right-handed pitchers, Ray Benge, to get Finn from Brooklyn but Manager Burt Shotton considers it was the smartest and most effective deal he has swung since he took charge of the club in -928. Finn is the best second sacker the club has had since Fresco Thompson.

Poison to Pirates

The 1932 Phillies finished a dozen games behind the Cubs but they demonstrated their ability against the stronger teams by winning a big majority of their games from Pittsburgh and Brooklyn. George Gibson, Pirate chief, called them "the toughest club in the league."

Shotton still has a problem in his holdout first baseman, Don Hurst, but he has developed a hard-hitting understudy for this emergency in Gus Dugas, obtained from Pittsburgh. With Dick Bartell at short and Captain "Pinky" Whitney at third, the Phillie pilot insists he would not trade his infield for any other in the league.

The Phils may miss the fleet George Davis, but Shotton Seems confident Chick Fullis will do as a replacement, flakned in left by Hal Lee and in right field by Chuck Klein, All-American clouter. Klein, a .350 slugger, is the powerhouse of the team.

Pitching Staff Stronger

The pitching staff looks stronger despite the loss of Benge. Jumbo Jim Elliott, giant southpaw, appears to have recovered from the lame back that handicapped him last year, and hopes to repeat his 1931 record of 19 victories. Flint Rhem, one of the best right handers in the league when on his good behavior, is attending strictly to business. Fidgety Phil Collins, veteran right-hander, and two youngsters who made good last year, Ed Holley and Roy Hansen, a southpaw, complete the probable starting staff. One of the best rookie prospects is Frank Pearce, who won 20 games for Nashville last season. Austin (Cy) Moore, obtained from Brooklyn, should be useful.

Virgil Davis, heavyweight backstop and .335 hitter, will do the bulk of the catching, with a first-rate understudy in Al Todd.

Bush At Work On Hurlers

Donie Satisfied With Hitting of Redleg Regulars.

By The Associated Press.

TAMPA, Fla.—Gratified with the hitting of his Redlegs in the five games they have played with major league clubs, Donie Bush, Cincinnati manager, today devoted his attention to the mound staff.

Bush cancelled an intra-club game scheduled for this afternoon believing a workout would do the players, especially Hafey, Morissey, Lucas and Rixey, just off the hospital list, more good.

BRADENTON, Fla. — The annual back-to-the-minor league parade was started at the St. Louis Cardinal training camp.

Two pitchers, Albert Fisher and Ted Nobriga, were released yesterday to the Houston club in the Texas league.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — Russell White, youthful southpaw who had experience in three camps last year, will have his chance today to show whether he has in that left arm enough magic to rate a 1933 berth with the St. Louis Browns.

Manager Bill Killefer said White and another newcomer, Jack Knott, will pitch for the Browns in this afternoon's exhibition game against the Buffalo team of the International league.

BILOXI, Miss. — Cleveland's Indians may go into the 1933 American league with a southpaw pitcher to bolster the twirling staff of five capable right handers.

Forrest Twogood, the former University of Iowa twirling ace, again demonstrated potential big league style by holding Washington to four scattered hits in six innings yesterday. He issued nine bases on balls, however.

HOUSTON, Texas—The Detroit Tigers were to meet the Houston Buffs of the Texas league here today in the initial exhibition game of their swing through the south and east. They broke camp at San Antonio yesterday.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—The hitless Boston Braves, who have dropped six straight games to the New York Yankees, will get another crack at the world's champions here today.

SARASOTA, Fla.—Heartened by their success against the Newark Bears, Manager Marty McManus and his Boston Red Sox will move on to Clearwater today with high hopes of evening their exhibition struggle with the Philadelphia Nationals.

MIAMI, Fla., March 25.—The two best rookie pitching prospects in the Brooklyn Dodger camp, says Manager Max Carey, are Walter Beck and Thornton Schwenk.

Beck is the right hander from Memphis who has pitched so well in exhibition games so far. Schwenk is a left-hander from Dayton with lots of stuff on teh ball.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—Babe Ruth is one ball player whose drawing power at the "gate" can be calculated rather accurately.

A crowd of 1,581, the biggest by far this season at the local park, turned out yesterday to see the Yankees slugger pound out a home run in the first exhibition game of the year. On Thursday, when Ruth had not settled his salary differences, and did not play, only 500 fans came out for the Yankees' exhibition.

PHOENIX, Ariz.—Third baseman Johnny Vergez, never considered one of the New York Giants' outstanding hitters, was leading the club at bat as the Giants came here for the first game of their homeward - bound barnstorming tour. Vergez hit something over .400 in exhibition games on the Pacific Coast.

CRACK GOLFERS IN OPEN EVENT

By The Associated Press.

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 25.—A host of America's greatest golfers set off this morning down the 36-hole road which will lead some of them to share of the $2,500 Charleston open prize.

In their van was Walter Hagen, who came to the final day of the tournament with a total of 139, one stroke ahead of Joe Kirkwood, New York trick shot artist. Archie Hambrick of Zanesville, O., Henry Picard of Charleston and Bobby Cruickshank of Richmon were tied for third place with 143.

Far down the list was Horton Smith of Oak Park, Ill., whose 159 placed him almost at the bottom of the professional list.

FACES STIFF SCHEDULE.

CINCINNATI, March 25.—Cincinnati's Bearcat baseball team will play every Buckeye conference team except Wittenberg and may play a third game with Miami, under a continuation of an extensive spring sports program, Dana M. King, athletic director and baseball coach, announced.

"BLONDY" RYAN COLORFUL NEW YORK ROOKIE

Helped Elect Boss Sheriff; Father Is Policeman.

(This is the second of a series of personality sketches on outstanding men in the major league training camps.)

By The Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES — From deep shortstop to first base is a long peg for the average ball player, but it's no distance at all to John (Blondy) Ryan, great rookie shortstop of the New York Giants.

Why, John used to flip footballs almost twice that far when he was a star quarterback at Holy Cross. Once he heaved one 62 yards to beat Harvard.

Blondy starred for the Crusaders in baseball and football for four years, '26, '27, '28 and '29, getting in before the freshman rule was adopted. In that time the Crusaders licked Harvard twice and tied them once on the gridiron.

The '29 Holy Cross baseball team, on which Ryan shortstopped, still is considered about the greatest college crew ever developed. Thirteen of its members graduated into professional ball. It won 25 games and lost only two.

Had Famous Tutors.

The young man who is trying to beat the veteran Travis Jackson out of his job should be a good shortstop. He's been building toward a big league career ever since he can remember, and he's had the finest tutoring obtainable.

His coach at Holy Cross was Jack Barry, shortstop on the Athletics' famous "$100,000 infield." During his college vacations he used to work out at Braves Field in Boston, where Johnny Evers and Rabbit Maranville showed him the tricks.

Upon graduation he hurried to Chicago for a tryout with the White Sox, and received some more pointers from Donie Bush. Now he is getting valuable tips from Jackson, his shortstopping rival.

Ryan finished the 1930 season with the White Sox, appearing in some 30 games. His debut was sensational. In his first game he hit a home run off Herb Pennock of the Yankees.

SPANK
HE OUGHT TO BE GOOD!
JOHN (BLONDY) RYAN
AP
AN OLD POLITICAL STUMPER

He Used to Throw 60-Yard Passes at Holy Cross.

From the Sox, Blondy moved through Indianapolis and Atlanta before "finding" himself last season with Buffalo. He hit only .267 for the Bisons, but his fielding was sensational. Also, he smacked 11 home runs, three of them with the bases loaded. He's looked like an improved hitter in the Giants' spring games.

Ryan has fine physical equipment, 175 pounds well distributed over a six-foot frame. His father is a policeman at Lynn, Mass., and that's considered a good sign by his new owners. One of the greatest players the Giants ever had, Long George Kelly, also was a policeman's son.

Knows His Politics.

While every team has its clubhouse "politicians," Ryan really has been on the hustings. At the close of last season he went out and made stump speeches for Frank Offerman, owner of the Buffalo club, who was running for sheriff of Erie county. He must have done fairly well, as Offerman was elected.

Ryan knows how to make friends. He's already popular with his new teammates. He attended the last minor league meeting at Columbus "just to see how things were run." When he had nothing else to do last winter, he assisted in coaching a high school football team at Lynn.

350 Meet In Butler Relays

Ralph Metcalfe Heads Brilliant Array of Luminaries.

By The Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 25. — Ralph Metcalfe, world's 60 - yard dash record holder from Marquette university, faces the starter's gun for the fourth time this week here today in the first annual Butler universitty relays.

The appearance of the Negro Olympic sprinter shares attention with a program of seven relay events and five individual events, in which thirty midwest colleges and universities have entered more than 350 of their best performers.

Metcalfe set the world indoor mark at his specialty at 6.1 seconds in the Central intercollegiate conference meet at South Bend, Ind., two weeks ago, and equalled it at Hamilton, Ontario, last Wednesday.

Another Negro star, Willis Ward, University of Michigan high jumper, will compete in that event. PIN CHAMPIONS SELDOM REPEAT

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., March 25. — "Uneasy rests the head that wears the crown" applies to the bowling game. Never in 32 years of American Bowling Congress tournament competition has an individual champion ever succeeded himself.

Otto Nitschke, veteran of more than 20 A. B. C. tournaments, will attempt to retain his individual title today. The Clevelander topped 7,177 bowlers in the tourney at Detroit last year, in scoring 731.

Four Local Amateurs Triumph On Midland Fight Card Friday

Keith Goodballet Wins on Knockout, While Jackie Trotter, Chet Prosser and Ralph Yanni Cop Decisions.

It was a big night for a quartet of East Liverpool amateur boxers Friday evening when Midland post No. 481, American Legion, staged its benefit show in the gymnasium of Lincoln high school in the upriver city. Approximately 1,200 fans witnessed the eight scraps which were staged.

Keith Goodballet, local middleweight, continued his sensational pace by kayoing Pete Boy of New Brighton in the second round. Boy is rated as one of the toughest boys in the Beaver valley, but he faded out of the picture as Goodballet came through with one of his customary wallops.

Jackie Trotter looked mighty good in scoring a decision over Young Reed of Toronto in the 120-pound class. Trotter had Reed down twice in the third heat and won with something to spare. Ralph Yanni of East End punched out a verdict over Nat Barnes, highly-touted New Brighton lad at 120 pounds. Chet Prosser was the other local lad to triumph, scoring a decision over Steve Brinzo of Beaver Falls at 145 pounds. This was one of the best scraps of the evening.

Sammy Yosho of Toronto, who fights out of Don Trotter's stable, accounted for the other knockout by flooring Tuffy Cananzi of New Galilee on a technical K. O. in the second heat. Earl Gualtier of Wellsville lost a decision to Butch Vinovich of Midland at 130 pounds.

Kid Robinson of Chester, 122, was the loser in his scrap with Dan Yonick of Aliquippa. John Madzan of Aliquippa was the only upper valley lad to triumph, scoring a decision over Al Verzelle of Midland in the 126-pound division.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — An expert at making roosters keep quiet, during those early morning hours, is the qualification of Officer E. W. Teater.

Officer Teater has been called upon several times to still the voices of the barnyard farm clocks and thereby enforce the anti-noise ordinance.

The system Officer Teater uses is to have the loud mouthed rooster placed on a perch near the top of the chicken house so he cannot straighten up. A rooster needs plenty of room in which to do his crowing, Officer Teater said.

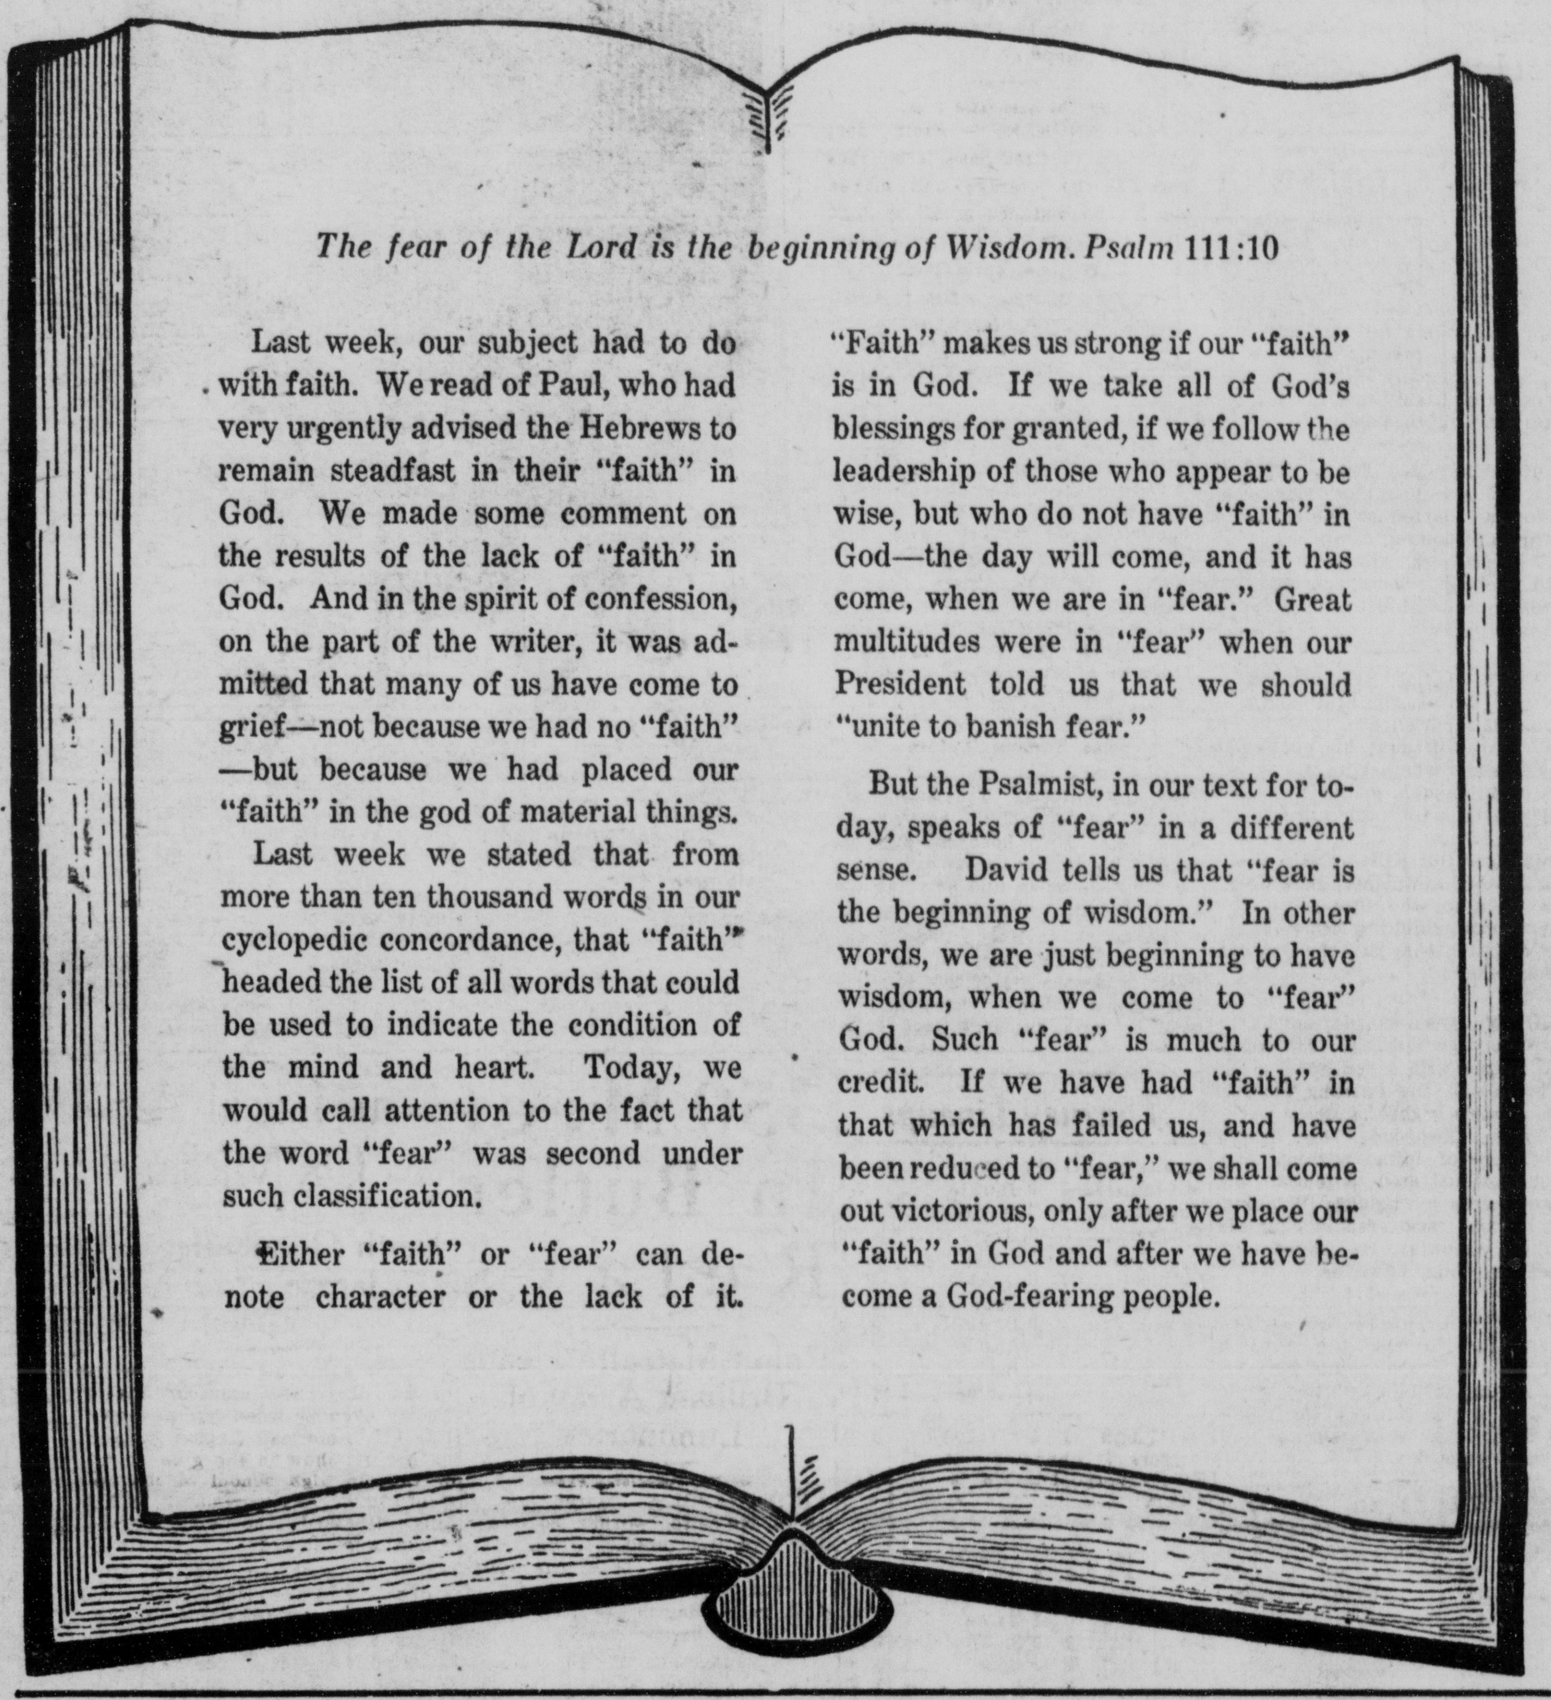
THE LIGHT of HIS WORD



The fear of the Lord is the beginning of Wisdom. Psalm 111:10

Last week, our subject had to do with faith. We read of Paul, who had very urgently advised the Hebrews to remain steadfast in their "faith" in God. We made some comment on the results of the lack of "faith" in God. And in the spirit of confession, on the part of the writer, it was admitted that many of us have come to grief—not because we had no "faith" —but because we had placed our "faith" in the god of material things.

Last week we stated that from more than ten thousand words in our cyclopedic concordance, that "faith" headed the list of all words that could be used to indicate the condition of the mind and heart. Today, we would call attention to the fact that the word "fear" was second under such classification.

Either "faith" or "fear" can denote character or the lack of it. "Faith" makes us strong if our "faith" is in God. If we take all of God's blessings for granted, if we follow the leadership of those who appear to be wise, but who do not have "faith" in God—the day will come, and it has come, when we are in "fear." Great multitudes were in "fear" when our President told us that we should "unite to banish fear."

But the Psalmist, in our text for today, speaks of "fear" in a different sense. David tells us that "fear is the beginning of wisdom." In other words, we are just beginning to have wisdom, when we come to "fear" God. Such "fear" is much to our credit. If we have had "faith" in that which has failed us, and have been reduced to "fear," we shall come out victorious, only after we place our "faith" in God and after we have become a God-fearing people.

THE LIGHT of HIS WORD

The fear of the Lord is the beginning of Wisdom. Psalm 111:10

Last week, our subject had to do with faith. We read of Paul, who had very urgently advised the Hebrews to remain steadfast in their "faith" in God. We made some comment on the results of the lack of "faith" in God. And in the spirit of confession, on the part of the writer, it was admitted that many of us have come to grief—not because we had no "faith"—but because we had placed our "faith" in the god of material things.

Last week we stated that from more than ten thousand words in our cyclopedic concordance, that "faith" headed the list of all words that could be used to indicate the condition of the mind and heart. Today, we would call attention to the fact that the word "fear" was second under such classification.

Either "faith" or "fear" can denote character or the lack of it. "Faith" makes us strong if our "faith" is in God. If we take all of God's blessings for granted, if we follow the leadership of those who appear to be wise, but who do not have "faith" in God—the day will come, and it has come, when we are in "fear." Great multitudes were in "fear" when our President told us that we should "unite to banish fear."

But the Psalmist, in our text for today, speaks of "fear" in a different sense. David tells us that "fear is the beginning of wisdom." In other words, we are just beginning to have wisdom, when we come to "fear" God. Such "fear" is much to our credit. If we have had "faith" in that which has failed us, and have been reduced to "fear," we shall come out victorious, only after we place our "faith" in God and after we have become a God-fearing people.

INCREASED USE ON AIR MAY EXHAUST SUPPLY OF JOKES

Ed Wynn, Jack Pearl Require 100 Jests Weekly.

At the rate jokes are being used up on the air, the supply soon will become exhausted, Fred Allen believes.

Allen, one of 20 or more comedians who, at the behest of sponsors, have transfered their activities from the stage to the microphone for the time being, cites this example.

"Why, Ed Wynn and Jack Pearl alone use maybe a hundred jokes a week, and in 20 weeks their total easily jumps around 2,000 jokes," he statistically pointed out.

Yosuke Matsuoka, head of the former Japanest delegation to the league of nations, is to be heard addressing guests at a dinner given in his honor by the Japanese chamber of commerce of New York when it is broadcast Tuesday night by WABC-CBS.

MARKETS

STOCK MARKET IS IRREGULAR

Recovery Follows Early Session Drifting.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 25 — The stock market again spent a session of idle drifting today, working somewhat lower for a time, but recovering in the late dealings to close narrowly irregular. The volume for the two-hour session approximated 400,000 shares.

A number of soft spots appeared in the earlier dealings, when such issues as American Telephone, Case, and DuPont lost 2 to 1½ points. These losses were largely recovered, however, save in DuPont, which came back only a fraction.

Declines of a point or more in U. S. Steel common, American Can, Union Pacific, Allied Chemical, and Santa Fe were recovered or reduced to minor fractions. Firm spots were few, but some of the "wet" issues and the New York Tractions, still reflecting latest unification steps, finished a little higher.

The day's business statistics include the weekly report of freight car loadings for class 1 carriers, indicating a fair comeback after the sharp drop occasioned by the banking holiday. The total gained 11,899 cars over the previous week, reaching 449,712 cars. This was a decrease of 23 per cent from the like week of 1932, comparing with a drop of nearly 24 per cent in the previous week. Coal shipments declined again, in keeping with seasonal trends, but merchandise and grain shipments were higher.

GRAIN

Chicago.

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 25. — Grain prices averaged lower early today, influenced by the fact that Liverpool wheat quotations had failed to reflect yesterday's advance here. Unsettlement of securities at New York acted also as a bearish factor. Opening ⅛-¾ down Chicago wheat futures recovered afterward. Corn started unchanged to ⅜ off and subsequently advanced.

and De Valera. They got only one vote each.

FRANCE, WHICH has kept gold out of circulation, excepting American gold coins, plentiful in France since the war, will soon resume issuing silver coins.

The Chamber of Deputies has authorized one hundred franc ($4) gold pieces as well as silver coins, but the gold issue will be postponed. Although she has more gold per capita than any nation, France is afraid that an adverse trade balance will send her off the gold basis.

Her new ten-franc silver coins, worth a little less than forty cents, will be about the size of our silver 25-cent piece. Both France and the United States, so far as the populations are concerned, are "off the gold basis." You cannot get gold in exchange for the money of either country. However, we have our gold locked away, precious as a "hair from the beard of the prophet." Perhaps that constitutes a sufficient "gold standard," even though our paper money promises to pay nothing, except more paper money.

Crosby county, Texas, citizens have laid out a program of community rabbit drives in an effort to stop inroads on crops.

PAYCUTS FOR OFFICIALS OF STATE ASKED

Elkrun Tax League Also Favors Mort Plan.

F. S. Armstrong, president of the recently organized Elkrun township tax league, announced today that the group had adopted resolutions asking the state assembly to reduce the salaries of all state, county and township officers, including all judges of all courts of Ohio to a level of the salaries prevailing from 1910 to 1914. It was also recommended that a certain section of the Mort school plan be adopted whereby a large part of the direct taxes for schools can be removed and a sales and income tax be substituted.

Other officers of the Elkrun league are vice president, W. A. Morris; secretary, Lawrence Baker; treasurer, Morris Ketchum.

The league also went on record as favoring the abolishment of the minimum salary law for school teachers and the elimination of the assistant county school superintendent post. It urged the state legislature to pass a law absolving property owners from having to pay any more special assessments on improved highways.

The resolutions were drawn up by a committee composed of R. W. Armstrong, W. A. Morris and P. C. Granger, which was also instructed to form a constitution and bylaws for a permanent organization.

MARKETS

STOCK MARKET IS IRREGULAR

Recovery Follows Early Session Drifting.

By The Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 25 — The stock market again spent a session of idle drifting today, working somewhat lower for a time, but recovering in the late dealings to close narrowly irregular. The volume for the two-hour session approximated 400,000 shares.

A number of soft spots appeared in the earlier dealings, when such issues as American Telephone, Case, and DuPont lost 2 to 1½ points. These losses were largely recovered, however, save in DuPont, which came back only a fraction.

Declines of a point or more in U. S. Steel common, American Can, Union Pacific, Allied Chemical, and Santa Fe were recovered or reduced to minor fractions. Firm spots were few, but some of the "wet" issues and the New York Tractions, still reflecting latest unification steps, finished a little higher.

The day's business statistics include the weekly report of freight car loadings for class 1 carriers, indicating a fair comeback after the sharp drop occasioned by the banking holiday. The total gained 11,899 cars over the previous week, reaching 449,712 cars. This was a decrease of 23 per cent from the like week of 1932, comparing with a drop of nearly 24 per cent in the previous week. Coal shipments declined again, in keeping with seasonal trends, but merchandise and grain shipments were higher.

GRAIN

Chicago.

By The Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 25. — Grain prices averaged lower early today, influenced by the fact that Liverpool wheat quotations had failed to reflect yesterday's advance here. Unsettlement of securities at New York acted also as a bearish factor. Opening ⅛-¾ down Chicago wheat futures recovered afterward. Corn started unchanged to ⅜ off and subsequently advanced.

FRANCE, WHICH has kept gold out of circulation, excepting American gold coins, plentiful in France since the war, will soon resume issuing silver coins.

The Chamber of Deputies has authorized one hundred franc ($4) gold pieces as well as silver coins, but the gold issue will be postponed. Although she has more gold per capita than any nation, France is afraid that an adverse trade balance will send her off the gold basis.

Her new ten-franc silver coins, worth a little less than forty cents, will be about the size of our silver 25-cent piece. Both France and the United States, so far as the populations are concerned, are "off the gold basis." You cannot get gold in exchange for the money of either country. However, we have our gold locked away, precious as a "hair from the beard of the prophet." Perhaps that constitutes a sufficient "gold standard," even though our paper money promises to pay nothing, except more paper money.

PAYCUTS FOR OFFICIALS OF STATE ASKED

Elkrun Tax League Also Favors Mort Plan.

F. S. Armstrong, president of the recently organized Elkrun township tax league, announced today that the group had adopted resolutions asking the state assembly to reduce the salaries of all state, county and township officers, including all judges of all courts of Ohio to a level of the salaries prevailing from 1910 to 1914. It was also recommended that a certain section of the Mort school plan be adopted whereby a large part of the direct taxes for schools can be removed and a sales and income tax be substituted.

Other officers of the Elkrun league are vice president, W. A. Morris; secretary, Lawrence Baker; treasurer, Morris Ketchum.

The league also went on record as favoring the abolishment of the minimum salary law for school teachers and the elimination of the assistant county school superintendent post. It urged the state legislature to pass a law absolving property owners from having to pay any more special assessments on improved highways.

The resolutions were drawn up by a committee composed of R. W. Armstrong, W. A. Morris and P. C. Granger, which was also instructed to form a constitution and bylaws for a permanent organization.

NEW BANKRUPTCY LAW IS EXPECTED TO HELP LANDLORDS

FUTURE RENTS MUST BE PAID IN FAILURES

Property Owners to Be Compensated For Losses.

FARMERS AIDED

Explanation Made of Amendments in Measure.

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 25. — Landlords and owners of real estate have been benefited by provisions of the bankruptcy law which became effective March 3, according to the National Association of Building Owners and Managers. The new law is an amendment to the bankruptcy law which was enacted by congress on July 1, 1898.

Additional jurisdiction is conferred upon bankruptcy courts by provisions for relief of individual debtors generally, relief to farmers in financial distress, and reorganization of railroads engaged in interstate commerce.

"In drafting the new law," said Association President William E. Malm, "congress sought to give relief to individual debtors of all claims, whether probable debts or not, and the legislation as first drafted did not make it clear that a claim for future rent was included. . . .

"However, more important of all, is the amendment which the association sponsored, providing that a claim for future rent shall constitute a provable debt and shall be liquidated. . . .

"The officers of the national association feel gratified that congress has recognized that a claim may be presented in bankruptcy by the landlord for whatever damage may be sustained by reason of the anticipatory breach of the lease contract through the bankruptcy of the lessee."

Fred I. Rowe Works out Program To Protect Lowlands During High-water Stages.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., March 24—The broad Ohio river valley will be prepared against future floods if plans of Fred I. Rowe reach fruition.

Rowe, chairman of the work project development committee of the state relief commission, visions a flood control program with the companion aims of employment relief and protection.

Preparing to outline his program, Rowe has requested data from every principal city in the Ohio river valley concerning the damage wrought by last week's inundations. Upon his information, Rowe's committee plans to proceed in preparing a flood control program in each of the state's four drainage districts.

Principally, Rowe said, the tentative project contemplates work along the Ohio river valley and in its drainage areas — the Miami, Scioto, Hocking and Muskingum.

Already, the committee is planning to use relief labor in a reforestation experiment in the Marietta region similar to that which would be conducted on a broad scale under Rowe's proposal.

PROTECT OHIO AGAINST FLOODS

Fred I. Rowe Works out Program To Protect Lowlands During High-water Stages.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., March 24—The broad Ohio river valley will be prepared against future floods if plans of Fred I. Rowe reach fruition.

Rowe, chairman of the work project development committee of the state relief commission, visions a flood control program with the companion aims of employment relief and protection.

Preparing to outline his program, Rowe has requested data from every principal city in the Ohio river valley concerning the damage wrought by last week's inundations. Upon his information, Rowe's committee plans to proceed in preparing a flood control program in each of the state's four drainage districts.

Principally, Rowe said, the tentative project contemplates work along the Ohio river valley and in its drainage areas — the Miami, Scioto, Hocking and Muskingum.

Already, the committee is planning to use relief labor in a reforestation experiment in the Marietta region similar to that which would be conducted on a broad scale under Rowe's proposal.
